Kentucky Utilities Co. Resumes Improvement After War Recess

Lexington, Ky., October 10—Highway, railroad spur and other ground improvements preliminary to construction of a $4,250,000 steam-electric generating plant and connecting transmission lines on the Kentucky River near Tyrone in Woodford county have been resumed after a four-year delay due to wartime conditions, it was announced today by R. M. Watt, President of Kentucky Utilities Company.

Work of installing foundations for the new riverside plant, which will have an initial capacity of 25,000 kilowatts, will start within a few weeks. A tentative completion date of January, 1947, has been set. Substantial local employment will be created for a period of more than a year, Mr. Watt said.

This will be a coal-burning electric generating plant, and no dams or other obstruction on the Kentucky River will be necessary. Water for operating the plant will be taken in on the upstream side, pass through the boilers and discharged on the downstream side.

Approximately forty employes will be required to operate the new plant, Mr. Watt stated. He estimated that the annual consumption of coal would be about 86,500 tons. This is equivalent to about 17,000 man-days of work, or 250 days work per year for sixty-eight miners.

The initial transmission line from this plant will be double circuit, 69,000 volts, and will form a junction with a similar high line between Dix Dam and Lexington.

"While we met every wartime demand of our customers, industrial, commercial, farm and residential without rationing or curtailment," Mr. Watt added, "we require this additional plant capacity to meet growing needs for power in our territory. It offers one more assurance that this company will continue to provide dependable, low-cost electric service to all its consumers, as well as providing the added stimulus for the many new industries coming into Kentucky now."

Perfusion to require the 278-acre tract now owned by the city, by the State Public Service Commission in August, 1941, and in November of that year the authorized Kentucky Utilities Company to build the new generating plant. Inability to secure war scarce material blocked the project temporarily.

On June 27, 1945, the State Commission issued an order authorizing the Company to proceed. A major portion of all of this work will be done by contract, and is under the direction of R. U. Engineering Department headed by E. W. Brown, vice-president.

Because of Unforseen Difficulties---

We will not be able to install our new lockers according to original plans.

There Will Be a Short Delay

before we can complete the work since we must remodel our storeroom to allow for the new lockers

In the Meantime

we will carry our full line of fine meats and other merchandise

We will make an announcement soon concerning the additional lockers.

The new unit, which includes a substation to transform the energy from the generated voltage to that carried by the transmission line, will provide a maximum potential generating capacity of the Kentucky Utilities System of 100,000 kilowatts. Other major producing units to be tied in with the Tyrone plant are steam plants at Pineville, Lexington, Pooles, Va., and Maysville; and hydro-electric plants at Dix Dam and Lock Seven.

In the Western Division serving the Purchase Area and the West Kentucky coal fields there are two steam plants at Paducah, and others at Earlington and at Wickham. Connections with other Kentucky facilities provide additional sources of power, when needed.

Spencer Farmers Grow More Vetch

It is estimated that at least 100 Spencer county farmer will harvest 5,000 to 6,000 bushels of the first time. County Agent N. B. Morris said. Last fall 200 farmers each of them could get seed from The Agricultural Conservation Association. They seeded a total of 1423 acres, a quantity sufficient for the transplanting of 4 acres. Seed is available at 18 to 20 cents a pound.

Mr. Morris said that vetch in Spencer county, seeded from mid-August to mid-September, will do more good than any crop he has ever produced. Seed can be sown broadcast, he said, through standing corn, after the last cultivation, or tobacco when plowed under in late spring.

The churches of Carlisle claim a membership of about 1600. About 600 go to both morning and evening services. This leaves around 1000 of our church members who do not attend their churches on any Sunday in the year.

When the church members themselves, do not think it worthy of their time to attend their churches where shall we lay the blame for the lack of loyalty of our young people to their churches?

The people who rate other things above their church will pay dearly for their failure. The church needs our loyalty, let us drop some of the lesser things and attend church.
