Here's Work for the Future

We want every Kentuckian to know our future plans. For Kentucky and the Telephone Company has working closely together for many years.

"What's coming up?" Quite a lot—the greatest expansion program in the history of the telephone in Kentucky as you are available.

It means spending millions of dollars to provide telephones for all who are being waited for them. This is one of our first jobs. A greatly expanded telephone program for our farmer friends is also in process. Expansion of long distance service is being scheduled. It will include the installation of central cables to handle more calls with speed and convenience for you, and provide more facilities for that convenience and a new service to motor vehicles is also in the making.

What does it all add up to? For one thing, it means more opportunity for the returning veteran, for all Kentuckians. It ensures an adequate telephone system for Kentucky, and that is essential to the state's growth. Each dollar invested in it is an investment in our future.

More work for the future. That's what it means, when you analyze it, and Kentuckians have a knack of getting at the heart of things. They like to see the marshalling of men, money and materials; that American resolution which put Kentucky into the line, and keeps it there.

Yes, there's property to work, and there's property more happiness for Kentuckians. As for the men and women of the Telephone Company in Kentucky, we face the future with confidence.

Futile Efforts To Attract Industry With "Cut-Rate" Power Is Sad Theme Of This Modern Tale Of Two Cities. This might be called "A Modern Tale of Two Cities." The elements of modern civilization in each instance are present. The only difference is that the one is a modern city and the other is a modern town. The one is a modern city and the other is a modern town. The one is a modern city and the other is a modern town.
