as the Republicans know how to build a machine once that party has assumed power. It may be many a day before Jefferson county again goes Democratic. In the meantime it will return Republican majorities, in all probability, almost equalling those rolled up in the Ninth district. To win a Democratic candidate is going to have to win without Louisville and just any candidate cannot do this.

Already there are movements in behalf of candidates who are not too impressive when measured by the qualifications a Democrat must possess, in our opinion, next year to win.

In Bourbon county, as all over the state, the party is in for a careful reorganization if it is to win the next governor's race. And even so, only a man who can really lead the party will be able to accomplish the fact.

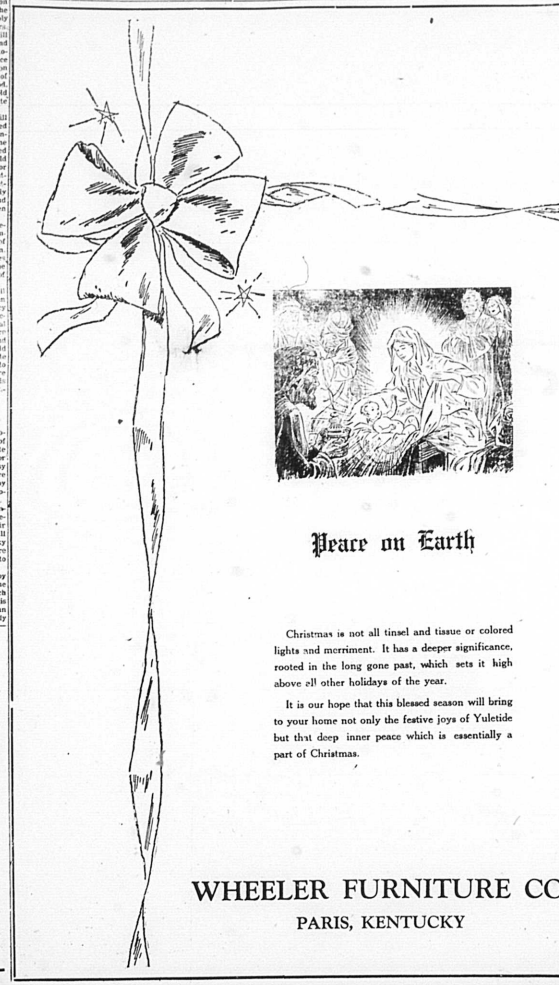
Such a candidate must be sought after rather than selected.—Paris Kentuckian-Citizen.

FULL EMPLOYMENT AND FARM PROSPERITY

During the war, with more Americans working and making good incomes than ever before demand for food grew by leaps and bounds, reveals Country Gentleman. Civilians wanted more steaks, chops, chickens, milk and dairy products. A report by the USDA, titled "What Price Cut Mean to American Farmers" shows that with full employment and the kind of export demand we could expect under such conditions, markets for farm products as a whole would be just about as high as they were during the war.

The increased demand for milk in recent years provides a fine example of the importance of plenty of food dollars to back up the desire for better nutrition. For many years the nutritionists had emphasized the importance of milk to good diet, but the payoff didn't come until we had full employment at good wages. We are now consuming about a third more fluid milk than the average for the five years before the war, and much more per capita than in 1929.

As farmers look ahead there are encouraging signs. Even though incomes have dropped some since V-J Day, demand for food has kept up. After World War I, farm depression continued most of the time for twenty years. That need not happen again. The market here at home can absorb all of most farm products that foreign demand releases—if we can have full production and employment in the cities.—Shelby News.



Peace on Earth

Christmas is not all tinsel and tissue or colored lights and merriment. It has a deeper significance, rooted in the long gone past, which sets it high above all other holidays of the year.

It is our hope that this blessed season will bring to your home not only the festive joys of Yuletide but that deep inner peace which is essentially a part of Christmas.

MEANINGLESS HAIR-SPLITTING

A good deal of meaningless hair-splitting is going on concerning the proposed Wagner-Murray-Dingell public health bill. Some of its advocates seem hurt when critics say that the measure amounts to socialized medicine, and claim that nothing of the kind is intended.

It is true that the bill would not go whole hog in the direction of socialization, by having the government establish a monopoly on hospitals, clinics and doctors. It is equally true that the bill would regiment medicine—and that is always the first step toward eventual socialization. Once the doctor becomes dependent on the government for part or all of his practice and his livelihood, the beginning of the end would be in sight for free, private medicine.

Further, the fact that the bill makes government-administered health insurance compulsory instead of voluntary indicates the way the wind blows. One hundred million or more Americans would be forced to accept and pay for this insurance whether they wanted it or not. It would be deducted from each paycheck, precisely as are social security taxes, and the annual cost would run between $37.50 and $40 per capita.

Again, the measure would reduce and in many instances eliminate the patient's freedom of choice in selecting a physician. That is always true of schemes to make the practice of medicine in whole or in part a function of the state.

The great objections to the bill are that they would give an enormously costly bureaucracy stringent powers over the practice of medicine, that political favoritism would in great measure determine a doctor's earnings and success, and that the people would be compelled to pay for a state doctor when they might prefer to pay a private doctor. Those are facts and hair-splitting over words won't change them.—Union County Advocate.

DEMOCRATS NEED TO DRAFT A CANDIDATE

It should be realized by Democrats interested in the return of the party to control of the state that the election of a Governor next year will not be an easy task. Moreover, it is imperative that a candidate be nominated by the party who can gain the support of all factions in the party.

Otherwise the same sad conclusion which has placed a Republican in the governor's chair and another in a Senate seat will occur again. And if Kentucky goes Republican next year there will be no further reason to class it as a Democratic state.

It should be borne in mind by thinking Democrats that the Third Congressional district which includes the city of Louisville is now in the hands of a Republican machine which will operate only
