TO THE average home seeker two houses may be practically identical in appearance and in equally desirable locations. But a look inside quickly indicates which house will be more "livable", which will remain modern longer, which will rent more readily and sell for a higher price.

In house "B" the housewife can arrange the furniture as she likes. Convenient outlets permit her to use labor-saving devices, and to give her family sight-saving light any place in any room. The hazard and unsightly appearance of extension cords running pell-mell are eliminated and the rooms are more attractive in appearance.

The family will enjoy better electric service in this home, and will be able to use electricity more economically.

Why? Because house "B" is adequately wired. It has enough convenient outlets in every room, enough switches to control lights without fumbling and stumbling in the dark. It has enough electrical circuits and large enough wire throughout the house to maintain proper voltage pressure so that each piece of electrical equipment does the job it was designed to do efficiently and economically.

If you are building or remodeling, wire ahead. Adequate Wiring costs little and pays big dividends.

This record of low cost performance, in these times of rising prices, is enough alone to stand out like a beacon in the night.

Adrian Doran, professor, preacher and congressman, was in this community Thursday to visit the Bald Hill Church of Christ, where he held his first meeting and preached his first funeral, the deceased having been the late Anderson McVey. Mr. Doran who is from Wingo, Ky., preached Sunday afternoon at a church which was built when George Washington was president, by Barton W. Stone and others.

Rev. F. M. Tinder gave some interesting remarks about the remodeling of the church. This is the historic Cane Ridge church.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Herndon of Lexington, Mrs. Mamie McVey, Mrs. J. M. Dotson and Mr. and Mrs. Tony Dotson went to the services.

We wish to express our belated regrets because of the death of our friend, Mrs. John Buchanan.

News in the World of Religion

W. W. Reid

Opposition is being voiced in many cities of the South and elsewhere to reports that there are plans afoot for the revival of the Ku Klux Klan under that or some other name; and to evidences of local situations leading to race tensions. . . . In Knoxville, Tenn., the Pastor's Association (white Protestant ministers) has merged with the Negro Pastor's Association, and the new association's work is done through biracial committees. One of its first acts was to urge that church members and non-church members refuse to join any proposed Klan organization and to oppose activities "which must hide behind masks or operate under cover of darkness." The Ministerial Association of Miami, Florida, after condemning a suggester revival of the Klan, authorized its executive to investigate the city's interracial conditions and to take any necessary steps to obviate friction and conflict.

Four hundred reform rabbis, gathered in Chicago at the recent session of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, took note of the alarming divorce rate in the United States during and since the war, and took steps to counsel and aid young married couples, especially those of the Jewish faith. Extreme cases of divorce figures were quoted from Los Angeles, Calif., where the divorce rate was 40 per cent of the marriage rate in 1945; and from Dallas County, Texas, where marriages and divorces about equaled each other. The rabbis and their synagogues will assist couples through marriage counselling, pre-martial conferences, institutes and classes on marriage and the home, and through the use of synagogues and parish houses for social, religious, and recreational purposes.

Pointing out that there are at least 20,000 children in more than 3,000 city and county jails in the United States, "many of whom are awaiting opportunity to have their guilt or innocence proven," the Northern Baptist Convention recently urged its member churches to investigate jails in their communities, and to urge the establishment of detention homes for children to keep them segregated from adult criminals. It also urged pastors to cooperate with all agencies attempting to protect children and to lessen juvenile deliquency.
