By E. Hampton Barnette

For many years it has been my privilege to visit among the people in the interest of their spiritual welfare. No people are more delighted to have a visit more than the aged folk. They are lonely, many of them ill, and a few poor in the luxuries of life. They are often neglected because they are old.

The years have a habit of creeping upon us all, and bringing us aching bones, and the liniment bottle. During these ripe years of old-age there is something sacred about the mysteries of life. Many of our people who have borne the burdens and toils of life feel that their task has been completed, and they only wait until they are called to join long gone friends who have preceded them to the great beyond. They do not hesitate to talk of those sacred things to which they journey. They do not live in this world as it is commonly known to our younger generation, but they seek a better country where their tender hands are not swollen with rheumatism, and their joints aching with pain. They seem to know their destination to be heavenly, and often welcome their departure.

Our younger generation owe a debt to one aged people which they will never be able to pay. All the beauty of life, the wealth of our great land, the system of our progress and the joy of our inheritance came to us through those who have borne heavy burdens and the heat of many summers. We are likely to forget these forbearers who have done so much for us, and claim our greatness to ourselves. Few of our churches, schools, homes, and business houses have been built in this generation. They were built before many of us were born; but we take them as a matter of our own concern, little aware of the fact that they are free gifts to us from that sturdy stock of people who now sit lonely in their rocking chairs and dream dreams of the dim yesteryears.

Their work has been so permanent it is rather hard for their children to maintain that which they have given us. Our appreciation should be so great that we should maintain our present inheritance without murmur. We should see to it that our aged friends are made comfortable to the end of their days, and that their loneliness is broken by our occasional presence with them.

What is believed to have been the first religious broadcast by a Christian minister in Japan since 1941, was sent over Radio Tokyo recently by the Rev. A. P. Bailey, a member of the Virginia Conference of the Methodist Church, and chaplain of "The Chapel of St. Luke, the Physician," in Tokyo. The Chapel is connected with an American army hospital —probably the former St. Luke's Hospital (missionary) in that city. This broadcast by Chaplain Bailey inaugurated a series of weekly Christian services—probably the first such series in the history of Japan's radio.

Nicholas County Tag Day For Children's Home

The Assemblies of God Children's Home will have Open House all day Saturday, June 15th. This will provide an opportunity for the people of Nicholas county to visit the Childrens' Home.

This institution owned and operated by the Kentucky District Council of the Assemblies of God has proven to be a "Mount of Blessings". Since the day of its opening September 21, 1945, twenty-one children have been admitted into the Home. Many of these little ones were deprived of love and care due to the death of parents, others are little victims of divorce courts, others completely deserted, while some have been cared for during the illness of parents.

The Home has been a Haven for four Nicholas county children, three of which are still in the Home receiving the best of care, physically, spiritually, and mentally.

Having been approved by the State Childs Welfare Division of Frankfort, and the Officials of Nicholas county it has been made possible to accommodate children of all faiths and creeds from the entire state of Kentucky.

It is supervised by a Board of Seven Directors of which the Rev. T. E. Gannon of Louisville is the President, and Mrs. Maxine Hartshorn, Carlisle, is Superintendent. The staff of workers in the Home include Mrs. Cleva Duncan of Texas, Miss Ann Dudish of Pennsylvania and Miss Greta Frederickson of Illinois, special childrens nurse.

Our aim is to provide a home for the needy children that will be home-like and not institutional, all children are taught Christian principals, and all workers in the Home are devout Christians.

There is no special source from which this Home is financially sponsored, but is completely operated by free will offerings and gifts.

You can help make this Home a blessing with your gifts and contributions. YOUR interest for these little unfortunate children will be greatly appreciated.

Law Enforcement Rolls Up Sleeves

Law enforcement, particularly with regard to speeding, illegal selling of intoxicants, drunkeness and drunken driving, will be the prime consideration of city and county law officers in a campaign to bring violations to a minimum, it was stated here by county and city officials this week.

The city and county should, and in all probability, will have the full support of the general public in its effort to abate bootlegging, which officers state, exists in various localities and which inevitably leads to disorder. Drunken driving, under the law, is a serious offense, being one of the most dangerous of all practices. Officials here are doing their duty in combining to break up this violation. Speeding, also held inexcusable and hazardous, is to meet with rigorous prosecution in local courts it has been announced. The campaign deserves the support of every right thinking person.
