Ardery Declares Reform Measures Are Not Radical

Rotary Speaker Cites Precedent for Changes In State Constitution

Inasmuch as Kentuckians in the past never failed to revise their constitution to changing conditions, the present campaign for a new charter is no radical departure from precedent, declared Philip P. Ardery, Frankfort, Ky., representing the campaign for a Kentucky Constitutional Convention, Thursday, January 9th in a speech before the Carlisle Rotary club.

Mr. Ardery urged the audience as community leaders to aid in acquainting the people with the state constitution and to participate actively in the campaign for the calling of a constitutional convention, the question to be submitted at the general election in 1947.

"Kentuckians always have been willing to revise their charter of government when they were convinced the best interests of the state would be served," Mr. Ardery said.

The speaker then pointed out that the people, in 1799, did not hesitate to frame a new document to replace the original constitution of 1792. The principal fault in the first charter, he stated, was that it provided for appointment of the Governor and other officers by electors who, in turn, were elected by the people. The second constitution held what was good in the old one, but rejected the objectionable feature by vesting the people with direct election of their Governor and Legislators.

Half a century later, the disaster continued, the people realized that conditions had changed enough from 1799 to 1849 to warrant a new charter more in tune with the times. A new constitution was written in 1849. It retained what was good in the old one. However, some new features adopted: Judges and minor state officials were to be elected; distribution of representatives from the census of 1790 to the census of 1840 was effected; and a public school system was guaranteed.

The third constitution serped until changing conditions seemed made it prudent. In 1890, the people called a convention. Wise delegates retained what was good in the old charter, but rejected the outmoded provisions, generally, brought Kentucky's charter into better relationship to the Federal Constitutia and corrected legislative evils grown up during the new era.

And now, 55 years later, the speaker continued, the people again find themselves living under the out-moded restrictions of a constitution not to the pattern of life in closing years of the last century. Since then, he said, we fought two world wars and undergone violent readjustments from both; have progressed from the steam age to an age of atomic power; from horse and buggy to the airplane; from letter postal service to telegraph, telephone and radio.

Mr. Ardery pointed out several defects in Kentucky's present constitution. He declared that its excessive length serves to create confusion; that it tends to "legislate" extensively, that its best for descriptive detail forces its violation by the Legislature and administrative officials, that it is both too difficult to revise and to amend, that it provides for too many elections and too many elected officials and that it hampers industrial, educational and social development. He insisted that attempting to bring the constitution up to date by amendments would be slower, more inefficient and more unsatisfactory than through convention.

The speaker predicted that the people, in 1947, will follow the example set by Kentuckians in 1799, 1849 and 1891, and again vote to bring their constitution up to date, at the same time retaining what is good in the old.

Lagging License Sales Threaten Before-Deadline Swamp in Clerk's Office

A total of 1,470 automobile licenses, he said, were issued for 1946, and if the sale continues as slowly as it has during the first two weeks of January, he pointed out, there will be more than 1,000 licenses to issue in this county during the last week in February.

"PLEASE," the county clerk said, "don't wait until the last week."

He emphasized that in order for drivers to obtain a 1947 license, they MUST bring their 1946 license certificates with them to the clerk's office.

Delegates from the Nicholas county chapter, American Red Cross, attended an all-day round table discussion held Monday at Paris, where organization procedures for the March, 1947 Red Cross Fund were discussed with representatives of 20 other chapters from the eastern Kentucky area.

Centered around the 1947 fund raising theme, "The Red Cross Carries On," the conference had as its primary objective an exchange of ideas pertaining to the planning and operational phases of fund raising, so that every adult would be approached and asked to share responsibility for the maintenance of Red Cross service to the communities and to members of the armed forces, wherever they are. Emphasis was placed on public relations and information for volunteer workers, campaign chairmen and solicitors.

Representing the Nicholas county chapter were Frank J. Harden, county chairman; Robert Coatney, 1947 fund chairman; Mrs. Frank Hinton, executive secretary; Miss Stella Booth, production chairman, and Mrs. Frank J. Harden.

The discussion was led by Ottis Regional director for Kentucky and West Virginia, from the American Red Cross Eastern headquarters at Alexandria, Va. The meeting was closed with a talk by the Rev. Harold Williamson, fund chairman for the Bourbon county chapter.

Former Carlisle Resident Suffers Heart Attack Tuesday

Madison Rhoades Burton, 55, of 371 South Limestone street, Lexington, died at the United States Public Health Service hospital for Drug Addicts, here, suddenly of a heart attack at 4:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in the doctor's office at the hospital.

200 Expected At Tobacco Meeting

Colored Slides Will Be Shown To Leaf-Growers

A group of more than 200 persons is expected to attend an open-farm tobacco discussion to be held at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon in the circuit courtroom here, it was predicted early this week by William T. Straw, county agent.

The discussion, which will center around comparisons of varieties of leaf suitable for growing next season, will be led, the county agent stated, by Russell Hunt, University of Kentucky field agent in tobacco, and Dr. W. D. Valleau, supervisor of tobacco plant breeding at the University Experimental Station.

In addition to tobacco varieties, farmers will be encouraged to bring up problems relative to type and quantities of fertilizer, methods of increasing soil fertility and the treatment of plant-bed diseases, including blue mold.

Those in attendance at the meeting will be shown a series of colored projector slides showing the phases of preparation for the Darrell tobacco demonstration held here last summer. The pictures, it was said, reveal the methods used in all stages of tobacco production.

Religious Survey To Be Planned By Sunday School Group

Plans for a county-wide religious survey to be made sometime during the spring will be discussed Sunday afternoon at a meeting of the Nicholas County Sunday School Association, it was announced by Mrs. Howard Irvin, president.

The session, which all pastors, Sunday school superintendents, teachers and officers are being urged to attend, will begin at 2:30 p. m. at the Baptist church.

In addition to making preparations for the proposed survey, Mrs. Irvin said a number of colored slides depicting the religious life of the county and the efforts in relation to the community will be shown to those in attendance.

Mrs. Irvin pointed out that the success of the spring survey will depend entirely on the amount of whole-hearted response and cooperation met among all of the county's Sunday school and church organizations.
