Rural Kentucky Needs Doctors

(The Courier-Journal)

There is a genuine emergency in the condition of medical care in rural and small-town Kentucky. In more than 100 counties there is now, or soon will be, a total shortage of 313 physicians. The heroic country doctor of legend is passing.

And with him passes something more than a tradition. Dwindling also is the assurance of adequate service for more and more of the 2,000,476 Kentuckians who live outside the cities. At that, the assurance has never been any too strong. It is estimated that loss of manpower from illness and physical defects costs Kentucky $90,000,000 a year. Of 378,861 young Kentuckians called, 58,979 were rejected by Selective Service for physical defects. One Kentucky youth in three has defects that limit his employability.

However, things are being done to reverse this trend. They make up the pieces of a dovetailed plan, which begins with recognition that more graduates of medical schools must be induced to practice in rural areas. To bring this about, more students of rural background must be recruited. Then more facilities for modern practice (hospitals, health centers, nursing aids) must be provided for the rural practitioner. And then—or perhaps first—Kentucky's facilities for first-rate medical education must be enlarged. All these details are being taken into account in a new movement which has acquired a certain dramatic momentum.

It began with the Statewide appeal, launched by members of the Kentucky State Medical Association, for contributions to a revolving loan fund for medical students who will agree to practice in small towns and rural areas. By this means the country boy, dreaming dreams of becoming a doctor but frustrated by poverty, may have his chance. The idea is catching on, but there is still a long way to go before the fund is sufficient.

And even then, it is obvious that this will not be enough to solve the problem. It would be an ineffectual smattering of a solution but for the other things. Along with it is going a campaign in small communities to raise local funds, through bond issues or popular subscriptions, to build hospitals and equip clinics and to qualify for Federal aid under the Hill-Burton Act. The graduate of a modern medical school is repelled by the prospect of performing desperate operations by candlelight on kitchen tables.

And he must be the graduate of a modern school. The standards must be the best. We don't like the idea of second-rate medical service for people who do not live in cities. This inexorably brings us squarely to the third essential of the campaign—to increase the capacity, effectiveness and modern facilities of Kentucky's only medical school, the venerable, top-ranking medical college of the University of Louisville.

This institution over the years has provided considerably more than half the doctors in Kentucky. It has produced some of the most eminent practitioners in the country—a president of the American Medical Association, of the American College of Surgeons, of professional societies large and small. And it has done so without cost to the State Government. Perhaps alone among the 48 States, Kentucky has been spared the expense and been enabled to evade the responsibility of this field of professional education.

There are too many arguments against the establishment of another medical school at the University of Kentucky to make that proposal practical. Every doctor knows that the answer to this problem lies in State support for the college in Louisville. Failure to rally to its emergency would bring about a tragedy. Without the assurance that it will be able to continue its honorable and distinguished career, any other striving to give Kentucky adequate medical care and a supply of doctors under any system of practice will be futile. It is a question that does not enter the debate over forms of health insurance. It is a question of institutions and personnel that must be involved in any system. There must be good and accessible colleges.

HEADQUARTERS
METHODIST CHURCH

Sunday school 10 o'clock. L. C. Morris, Supt.

Preaching 11 o'clock by the Rev. L. C. Morris.

Preaching at 7 p. m. by the pastor, the Rev. G. W. Kelley.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH

The first month of 1947 was a success in the Carlisle Christian church; the Sunday school showed a good increase, the average per Sunday was 228; another improvement was seen in the youth work; an increased number are meeting each Sunday night at six o'clock for study and song practice. This group will conduct the worship service on Feb. 16 at 7 p. m.

Next Sunday the morning service will be "Piety Without Godliness."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Love" is the subject for Sunday, Feb. 2. The Golden Text is: "Beloved let us love one another: for love is of God . . . He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love." (1 John 4: 7, 8)

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him." (1 John 4:16).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "People go into sectaries over the sense of a corporeal Jehovah, though with scarcely a cobist minister who served leading spark of love in their hearts, yet God is Love, and without Love, God, immortality cannot appear." (P. 312).

BAPTIST CHURCH

The monthly Worker's Council meeting of the Baptist Sunday school will be held at the home of Dr. and Mrs. G. T. Cowan Thursday night at 7:30 o'clock.

Sunday, Feb. 2 has been designated by Baptists as Baptist World Alliance Day in recognition of the world organization which bears that name. In 1905 representatives from thirty countries and until organizations met in London, England for the first Baptist World Congress. In the forty years following this meeting Baptists have grown from fewer than six million to sixteen million. This figure represents only enrolled members. The last meeting of the World Alliance was held in Atlanta in 1939. This year after a delay of three years Baptists from all over the world will assemble at Copenhagen, Denmark from July 29 to August 3 for their seventh congress. In keeping with the theme of Baptist World Alliance Day the pastor's evening sermon will be on the subject "The World Responsibility of Baptists."

Methodist Broadcast

Dr William B Selah, pastor Galloway Memorial Methodist church, Jackson, Mississippi, speaks over The Methodist Hour network Sunday morning, February 2, on the subject "Character is Fate."

Dr Selah is a prominent Methodist minister who served leading appointments in Kansas City, Memphis, Oklahoma City before moving to Mississippi. He is a native of Sedalia, Missouri, a graduate of Central College with post graduate work at Yale University.

The Methodist Hour is now broadcast over an independent network of fifty stations; the network extending from Baltimore to Carlsbad, New Mexico and from Miami to Kansas City. This radio time is made available to members of the Southern Religious Radio Conference, an organization composed of radio committees from the Southern Baptist Convention, the Presbyterian Church in the U. S., the Protestant Episcopal Church and The Methodist Church by the independent stations on this network. These programs are heard in this vicinity over station, WHAS at 7:30 a. m. and originate in the studios of Religious Radio Center, Atlanta, Georgia.

SCOUT TROOP IS ORGANIZED IN HENRYVILLE

Plans are underway to form a troop of Boy Scouts in Henryville, it was announced by Everett Smith this week. A committee of members met Tuesday night and elected Brother Ellison, Scoutmaster and Marion Shepherd, assistant Scoutmaster. The committee includes Tom Williams, chairman, Stanley Wilson, Carl Blount.

Next meeting will be held Tuesday night and the troop will be registered at that time. On the following Tuesday night Mr. Coleman, a representative of the Bluegrass Council, will visit the troop to assist in organization.

Farm Bureau Risk Division Established

Insuguration of a life insurance division of the local Farm Bureau insurance agency was effected at a meeting of insurance agents recently at the Phoenix hotel in Lexington.

W. E. Howard, field representative from Louisville, J. M. Ownbey of Lexington, division supervisor, and Paul Edwards, representative of this Southern Farm Bureau Life Insurance company, met at the hotel with agents from this district to complete work necessary to completion of the new insurance line here. Formerly, only automobile and hospitalization insurance were available through the farm bureau in this district.

H. Clay Richey and Otta B. Fryman, local Farm Bureau insurance agents, attended Tuesday's meeting.

Dairy Committee Advances Plans

The county dairy committee met recently at the county agent's office and outlined procedure for dairy development in Nicholas county. W. L. Walker, field agent in dairying, University of Kentucky, attended the meeting. Owl Day was elected chairman of this group at a meeting held last August.

The project to receive most support will be the immediate sign-up of cows for the artificial breeding program. Walker stressed that this plan is particularly for the small herd owner. Dairy committeemen will make an immediate canvass of their neighborhoods in effort to sign one thousand cows, necessary for the operation of the program. Other work of this committee will be announced next week.

HOW COMMUNITY PLANNING HAS HELPED THE PEOPLE OF 20 KENTUCKY CITIES

FINER living conditions, greater and better employment opportunities, and additional local and state tax revenues for roads and schools rank high among the hopes-for-the-future of people in every city in Kentucky. To make them possible, greater industrialization, town by town, is the aim of business and civic organizations throughout the state.

During 1946, the planning and efforts of no fewer than 20 Kentucky communities bore fruit. New industries brought new benefits to their citizens and to their adjacent farm populations. In these 20 cities were located 28 new manufacturing or processing plants that will employ more than 4,000 local people.

The location of these new plants did not come about through mere chance. Progressive leaders in these communities assembled information about plant sites, living conditions, the amount of male and female labor available, tax rates, transportation facilities, and other pertinent data. And the proper agencies made it known that the people in the communities would welcome new industry. Out-of-state business men were made to feel wanted, and were sold on the town. Your community can do it, too.

MY COMPANY WANTS TO HELP YOUR COMMUNITY

Its Industrial Department will work with your business leaders, just as it will with those in the 20 cities mentioned above. As an aid in assembling required information, it has prepared and published a booklet that carefully and completely outlines each step in building and promoting a better home town. This booklet was published following a survey of all local and regional methods used throughout the South to aid community growth and development. Ask for a copy of the Better Home Town survey at your nearest K. U. office, or write Kentucky Utilities Company, Lexington. It's free to anyone interested in improving his community.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Bert Solves the Labor Problem

You hear a lot about capital and labor nowadays, as if the two could never get together. But look at Bert Childers—who has 320 acres of producing land, a fair-sized herd of cattle, and two farm hands working for him.

If you called Bert a "capitalist" he wouldn't know what you meant, and neither would Spike and Sandy, the hired men. Bert works side by side with both of them; and in the evenings they sit around the fire together—sharing a friendly glass of beer or two.

If anybody has a beef—whether he's an employee or equipment—they talk it over at these friendly evening sessions.

I don't say all labor problems are as simple as Bert's. But from where I sit, the basic principle applies to any farm or factory or business: A principle of confidence and mutual respect, of daily talks and a friendly and congenial atmosphere.
