Zoning Would Help

Carlisle took a step forward with its purchase of new fire fighting equipment and the installation of a new fire alarm system but there remains one hazard to be eliminated before the volunteer fire department can function without loss of valuable time in getting to a fire.

Some towns having a volunteer fire department and an independently owned telephone system have a quick method of locating fires. The minute a fire alarm sounds all the resident has to do is pick up his telephone and the operator immediately identifies the property threatened.

Here "big business", in the form of a monster ownership of the telephone company, makes such an arrangement impossible. As a result persons trying to locate the fire are apt to snarl traffic while cruising hazardly about the city.

The city council could save time, property and possible injury to residents by working out a code of signals which would be used by the new fire alarm system. For example, one long and one short blast would indicate that the fire was in the business district. Two long blasts would indicate zone two or that portion of the residential district lying north of Main street and west of Locust, and so on.

It is not the Mercury's intention to dictate the moves of the city council but to offer suggestions which that body may use as it sees fit. However, it can't help but notice the haphazard manner in which well meaning individuals have sent their cars careening over the city's streets as soon as they hear the fire alarm.

A Cup Of Good Coffee

There are few things better than a good cup of coffee. It is at its best when full-bodied, neither so small that it can be consumed at a gulp nor so big as to become irksome before it can be finished, brewed in such a manner that it retains its flavor to the end.

But when you have taken the last sip and put down the empty cup it is impossible, if you have a sensative nature, not to feel a certain melancholy at the thought of all the labor, the care and pains that have gone, the thought, the trouble, the complicated organization that has been required to provide you with a few minutes of palate-warming pleasure.

For this men have sweltered under tropical suns and sailors have sloshed over brine battered decks of stormy seas.

Constitutional Convention

A Guest Editorial
By A. B. Guthrie, Jr.

No reason actually exists for regarding a constitutional convention with misgivings. The "fears" expressed by certain reactionary leaders have the ring of propaganda. By no other means can Kentucky so quickly and surely square governmental structure with progress than through convention.

It doesn't do to say that what was good enough for pappy is good enough for us. The fact is that what was good enough for one generation is never good enough for the next. Good roads, better schools, direct elections, airplanes and airports, gasoline engines and radios, regulation of public utilities—all these advances and scores besides have come about because people realized that improvements and conveniences were possible and desirable no matter if pappy didn't have the benefit of them.

It seems to us, however, that a deeper point is to be found in the professed uneasiness of the gentlemen who shy away from a convention. Implicit and sometimes explicit in their position is a fear of the people. They act as if all the smart Kentuckians were dead, as if there wasn't enough sense left in Kentuckians, or enough courage and honesty and honor, to execute a workable constitution. Leave it to the dead, they say; the living can't be trusted.

We say rubbish. We say that what dead Kentuckians have done, live ones can do—and can do with due attention to developments undreamed of by deceased elders.

We aren't afraid of the people, and we aren't afraid, as are these backward-looking men, that a new constitution will be a case of out of the frying pan into the fire. The idea of special interests dominating the convention and "destroying" the constitution is redundous. In the first place, the voters at large elect representatives to a constitutional convention—and we don't think they'll elect dishonest or stupid ones. In the second place, the voters will have opportunity to decide, after the new constitution is drawn, whether to adopt it or to retain the old one. Where lies the danger there?

Through the decades Kentucky has got along pretty well through a democratic or, if you prefer, a representative system of government. We say it will get along all right that way in the future—much better than if live hopes and live needs and live people must defer to dead times and dead decisions and delegates long since under-ground.

Pulse of the Press

Be Polite to "Kids"

We know. Every week is National This-or-That Week. But school is out now. More children will be home more often. It is time to inaugurate a National Be-Polite-to-Children Week. We don't mean a Be-Kind-to-Children Week. There is enough well-intentioned unkindness to "kids" already. Be kind, if you can. But by all means be polite to them. Just polite.

A schoolteacher once urged a third-graders to write down what they might feel like saying to her. According to the New York Times Magazine, she collected, among other rare morsels of literature, the complaint of a little girl who often was required to sit in a circle of grown-ups, hearing their talk, enduring their patronizing, answering their questions. That's enough—you can see the picture. She wrote: "It makes me feel lonely."—Christian Science Monitor.

A Shocking Case of Intolerance

We who reside in Kentucky and all points South of the Mason-Dixon Line are usually given the credit for being responsible for just about all the prejudice and intolerance, racial and otherwise, now prevalent in the United States. It seems, however, that the North, supposedly the seat of culture and equality, can at times outdo even the South in this respect.

We refer to the recent news stories from a little town called Rose City, Michigan. In that community a Methodist minister who was so outspoken in a temperance fight that he was run out of town. The minister, the Rev. Cecil H. Scott, had charged that the town was steeped in drunkenness and immorality and held the city officials responsible.

When the mayor found that he could not legally oust Scott from the city a boycott was organized. First they shut off the water supply to the parsonage. Scott can find no one that will dig a well for him. Later the grocery stores refused to sell the Scott family food. Now the city Health officer has stated that he might condemn the parsonage for occupancy because it has no water supply.

It seems that in this organized and insidious effort to silence Scott one of the inalienable rights of every citizen of this land, the freedom of speech, has been infringed upon. When such action is not only countenanced but also led by public officials, grave complications are portended.

Combined with recent developments in Boston, "the seat of culture of the New World," in which that city's mayor has been sentenced to prison for embezzlement, one is led to the conclusion that possibly the folk of the North had better get their own house in order before chastising us.—The Shelby News.

Nicholas 4-H Boys Attend Judging Training School

Nine Nicholas County 4-H boys accompanied E. N. Royster, assistant county agent, to Lexington on July 2 to attend a 4-H livestock judging training school which was held at the University Experiment Station stock farm. The boys attending were: Jimmie Judge, Carlisle; Marion Rose and Horace McLean, Myers; Harold Honaker and Dorsey Watkins, Parks; Buddy Buckler and Leonard Clark, East Union; and Gayle Maffett and Junior Scott, Headquarters. The boys were given instructions and training in the judging of fat livestock. This included points in the judging of sheep, beef cattle and hogs. Each boy was given an opportunity to judge a ring of the above livestock.

Dr. W. P. Garrigus, professor of the animal husbandry department, discussed the state's system of judging livestock. Dr. Garrigus explained four steps in livestock judging as follows: 1. Picture the ideal. 2. Compare each animal with the ideal. 3. Decide on the placing 1, 2, 3, etc. 4. Explain your placing.

The boys who attended this training school will continue training in judging livestock at various sessions throughout the county with the thought in mind that the four best judges will represent Nicholas county in the 4-H District Fair and the Kentucky State Fair.

Annual Field Day at Experiment Station Scheduled

The Agronomy Field Day at the Experiment Station Farm at Lexington, Kentucky, has been scheduled for Thursday, August 7. Visitors will see the field experiments with Burley tobacco, which include fertilizer and cropping tests, breeding work, and variety tests. The forage crop plots of red clovers, white and Ladino clover, alfalfa, tall fescue, Kentucky bluegrass, and orchard grass will be featured also. Those interested in corn breeding and hybrid corn testing will have the opportunity of seeing the breeding and yield-testing plots of this crop. The meeting will begin at 10 a. m.

Read The Seed Tag

Every bag or other container of seed in quantities of one pound or more when offered or exposed for sale in Kentucky, must, under the provisions of the pure seed law, carry an official Kentucky State seed tag. This tag should show among other things, the kind of seed, per cent of pure seed, per cent of crop seed, per cent of germination, per cent of inert matter, per cent of weed seeds, and the name and number of noxious weed seed per ounce of the agricultural seed. The prospective buyer of seeds should not fail to read the tag attached to the seed container.

Ellisville Homemakers

The Ellisville Homemakers Club met July 2 at Blue Lick State Park. Having no major project lesson, we enjoyed the morning in guessing games and our social hour. At noon we had a picnic lunch and watermelon feast.

At 1 p. m. we were called to order by our president roll call, giving a characteristic of a friend. Then an auction sale of useful homemade articles, consisting of laundry bags, clothes pins, aprons, dress protectors, cushion covers, luncheon cloths and pot holders, all made from feed sacks and by patterns we have had in our lessons of the past year.

The sale netted $7.10 the proceeds to pay for a 4-H club member to be sent to camp this month.

We had one new member, Mrs. W. E. Martin.

With the ideal weather we had a profitable, enjoyable day.

At our regular meeting in June we met at the home of Mrs. George H. Freer. The officers were elected for the coming year: Mrs. J. A. Standiford, president; Mrs. Jack Caswell, vice president; Mrs. J. W. Kenton, secretary and treasurer; Mrs. George H. Carter, reading chairman; Mrs. Victor Day, program chairman; Mrs. J. L. Barnett, citizenship chairman; Mrs. R. Donald Fair, Salary less W. T. & T. H.

We will meet September 2 at the home of Mrs. J. A. Banta.

God in His World

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for July 13 is Genesis 1; Job 38:4-41; Matthew . 6:25-30, the Memory verse being Psalm 24:1, "The earth is Jehovah's, and the fullness thereof, the world, and they that dwell therein.")

THE FIRST part of our lesson refers us to the first chapter of Genesis, in which God created the world. They are so familiar to us, that while we may be glad to read them over, our real lesson is the Lord's answer to Job and his discussion with his friends.

We are told that in the 75 years that the International Sunday school lessons have been published, this is the first time these passages from the Book of Job have been assigned.

You remember that in our last lesson Job was reviewing his life to see if he had failed in any way and so could understand that the terrible things that had happened to him were the result of his sins. He concludes his argument with: "If I have eaten the fruits thereof without money, or have caused the owners thereof to lose their life: Let thistles grow instead of wheat, and cockle instead of barley. The words of Job are ended."

Then the Lord answered Job out of the whirlwind, and said, Who is this that darkeneth counsel by words without knowledge? Gird up now thy loins like a man; for I will demand of thee, and answer thou me."

The Lord made no apology for allowing Job, the righteous man, to suffer as he had. He was to view the wonders of Nature and asks if Job had anything to do with controlling them? He makes Job feel very humble and lowly indeed, as we shall see.

"Where was thou when I laid the foundations of the earth? declare, if thou hast understanding.

"Who hath laid the measures thereof, if thou knowest? or who stretched the line upon it?

"Whereupon are the foundations thereof fastened? or who laid the corner stone thereof?

When the Stars Sang Together

"When the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy?"

Question follows question, without chance for Job to answer, even if he had the answers ready.

Who controlled the seas and said, "Hitherto shalt thou come, but no further, and here shall thy proud waves be stayed?"

"Have the gates of death been opened unto thee? or hast thou seen the doors of the shadow of death?"

"Hast thou entered into the treasure of the snow? or hast thou seen the treasures of the hail?"

"Canst thou bind the sweet influences of Pleiades, or loose the bands of Orion?

"Canst thou bring forth Mazzaroth in his season? or canst thou guide Acturus with his sons?

"Knowest thou the ordinances of heaven? Canst thou set the dominion thereof in the earth?

"Canst thou lift up thy voice to the clouds, that abundance of waters may cover thee?

"Canst thou send lightnings, that they may go, and say until thee, Here we are?"

How About Wild Creatures?

"The Lord went on to ask how much Job knew about the wild creatures of the earth, "Wilt thou hunt the prey for the lion? or fill the appetite of the young lions, when they couch in their dens, and abide in the covert to lie in wait?

"Who provideth for the raven his food? when his young ones cry unto God, they wander for lack of meat."

Does Job know about the ways of the wild goat, or can he tame the roe-deer, he is asked. The untamed is said to be the wild ox, now extinct, but certainly untamable as he is the earth. The wild ass, the wild ox, the ostrich, the horse; the hawk and the eagle. The description of the horse is very fine. Job is asked if he can put a thought to be the hippopotamus. The leviathan is also thought to be with controlling them? He makes Job feel very humble and lowly indeed, as we shall see.

"Shall he that contendeth with the Almighty instruct him? he that reproveth God, let him answer it."

Then Job answered the Lord, and said,

"Behold, I am vile; what shall I answer thee? I will lay mine hand upon my mouth.

"Once have I spoken; but I will not answer: yea, twice; but I will proceed no further."

He realizes that he is indeed a very small part of the universe, and what are his sufferings compared with the wondrous workings of the Lord in the world?

SALTWELL

By U. G. Mattox

Rev. A. G. Cox filled his appointment here Sunday morning and evening.

Mr. Carl Rucker of Ashland is visiting friends here. His father, the Rev. B. B. Rucker, was a former pastor here.

Mrs. Pearl Hill of Millersburg visited her sister, Mrs. A. G. Cox, and the Rev. Cox one past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Bosley and daughter, Roberta, and Mrs. Gene Kenney, Mrs. Louella Kendall spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Hollar at Barefoot.

Mrs. J. H. Earlywine departed this life Saturday morning, July 5. She was the daughter of the late Garrett and Nannie Mattox. She was united in marriage to J. H. Earlywine in 1890. To this union were born five children, Ernie, Verna (deceased), Mrs. Walter Hill of Shawhan, Jesse J. Earlywine of Cincinnati and Mrs. Thomas Gaunce of Millersburg. She would have been 80 years old had she lived until August 14.

She is also survived by five brothers, Floyd, Samuel, Joseph, Berry and Elva Mattox and two sisters, Mrs. E. P. Wagoner and Mrs. Pearl Wagoner. Her funeral took place here Monday afternoon conducted by the Rev. J. H. Finch of Berea, assisted by Rev. A. G. Cox. Burial followed in Carlisle cemetery.

Dos Job know about the ways of the wild goat, or can he tame the roe-deer, he is asked. The untamed is said to be the wild ox, now extinct, but certainly untamable as he is the earth. The wild ass, the wild ox, the ostrich, the horse; the hawk and the eagle. The description of the horse is very fine. Job is asked if he can put a thought to be the hippopotamus. The leviathan is also thought to be with controlling them? He makes Job feel very humble and lowly indeed, as we shall see.

"Where was thou when I laid the foundations of the earth? declare, if thou hast understanding.

"Who hath laid the measures thereof, if thou knowest? or who stretched the line upon it?

"Whereupon are the foundations thereof fastened? or who laid the corner stone thereof?

When the Stars Sang Together

"When the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy?"

Question follows question, without chance for Job to answer, even if he had the answers ready.

Who controlled the seas and said, "Hitherto shalt thou come, but no further, and here shall thy proud waves be stayed?"

"Have the gates of death been opened unto thee? or hast thou seen the doors of the shadow of death?"

"Hast thou entered into the treasure of the snow? or hast thou seen the treasures of the hail?"

"Canst thou bind the sweet influences of Pleiades, or loose the bands of Orion?

"Canst thou bring forth Mazzaroth in his season? or canst thou guide Acturus with his sons?

"Knowest thou the ordinances of heaven? Canst thou set the dominion thereof in the earth?

"Canst thou lift up thy voice to the clouds, that abundance of waters may cover thee?

"Canst thou send lightnings, that they may go, and say until thee, Here we are?"

How About Wild Creatures?

"The Lord went on to ask how much Job knew about the wild creatures of the earth, "Wilt thou hunt the prey for the lion? or fill the appetite of the young lions, when they couch in their dens, and abide in the covert to lie in wait?

"Who provideth for the raven his food? when his young ones cry unto God, they wander for lack of meat."
