U. S. Has Too Many Potatoes; Spuds, That Is, Not Greenbacks | Hungry Britons Spurn Spuds Insisting They Carry a Blight

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Agriculture department officials are casting cautious glances at the 1947 potato crop, which may be a bonanza like last year's when many millions of bushels were destroyed to keep prices up.

Already a relatively small amount of the 1947 potato crop has been destroyed in Alabama. How much more of it will have to be disposed of by the government is yet unknown—and will remain unknown until the northern states crop is harvested.

Under a mandate of congress, the government is forced to pay subsidies to potato growers when the market price falls below parity. This cost Uncle Sam a good bit of money last year and lost a lot of potatoes from the bumper crop.

Now angry cries are heard in Congress about the government destroying potatoes from the 1947 crop. Most of the blasts come from new congressmen, who—department officials say privately—do not know the law about potatoes, or that Congress ordered the subsidy.

The United States has tried to give potatoes to the starving people abroad, but they will not take them. Great Britain, which has a terrific food shortage, will not accept United States potatoes, claiming they have a disease which would blight British spuds.

The government is spending the taxpayers' money to keep the price of potatoes up so the taxpayers will have to pay more for them.

● ROSIE AND WINNIE—Remember Rosie the Riveter and Winnie the Welder? Well, now that the backs in industry, they have traded slacks and overalls for daintier attire. And they like it!

The United States Women's Bureau says the report based on a survey designed to find out what happened to the thousands of Rosies and Winnies who lost their wartime jobs after V-J Day.

The Bureau found that at Baltimore, a large industrial city, two-thirds of women war workers now have nearly peacetime jobs.

The agency said that women in factories have turned from such rugged jobs as welding and riveting to assembling, inspecting, testing, and operation of light machines. The report observed:

"Women like such work because it gives them an opportunity to use their manual dexterity, exercise responsibility and pay attention to minute details."

However, war work had one major effect on women in industry. Before the war, more than 50 per cent of factory-employed women worked in garment or textile plants. Now they prefer metal working assignments.

● FCC ECONOMY—The Federal Communications Commission is aligning itself with the current lower-prices campaign by pushing down the price of transcripts of commission testimony.

In inviting bids from stenographic reporting companies for the next fiscal year, the FCC specifically mentioned the desirability of lowering the cost of the transcripts to the radio industry and other interested parties.

Moreover, the commission announced that it will forego the $15,000 yearly bonus which the stenographic companies have paid the government in the past for the exclusive privilege of doing this work.

The companies make up the bonus through sale of transcripts to interested parties. The commission feels that its abandonment of the bonus it is setting a good example in the trend to save money for buyers.

Miss Dorothy Howe, home demonstration agent, assisted by Mrs. Naomi Stephenson, home economist, will give at her home demonstrating to all homemakers of Nicholas county in a canning demonstration which will be held at 1:30 p. m., Tuesday, July 1 at the Lyric theatre. Lexington Trots Card Held Best In Years

The Lexington Trots Grand Circuit meeting, to be held Sept. 2-7 over its home course, be one of the most successful ever held, and certainly one of the best meetings in recent years.

Headlining the 10-day program will be the 55th Renewal of the Kentucky Futurity, to be raced Saturday, Sept. 27. This event will be worth an estimated $40,000.

Two other outstanding events on the card are the 2-year-old trials of the Hanover Shoe Farm stakes, one a trot for two-year-old fillies, the other a pacing event for the same aged fillies. Each event will be raced for an estimated $5,000.

There will be 20 other early closing events, with values ranging from $2,000 to $3,000, including such historic events as the Almahurst, Galnesway, Transylvania and many others.

In addition, there will be approximately 50 overnight dashes, conditioned for horses on the grounds. All of these will be worth at least $500.

Pari-mutuel betting will be held on all events at this year's meeting, and with thru various races set at varied distances, wide-open races are expected.

Many improvements have been made this year at the trotting track under the direction of the Lexington Trots Breeders Association, which took over the track three years ago with the intention of putting trotting racing back on the high plane it previously enjoyed in Lexington.

Additional seats will be erected this year. While some of the seats in the grandstand will be sold as reserved seats, there will be available a number of seats for general admission public, except on Futurity Day, when all seats will be reserved.

A near-record number of horses have been entered in the early closing events, indicating a standout meeting this year.

Library Book Drive Will Open Monday

The campaign to secure books for the newly organized Nicholas County Memorial Library will get under way next Monday and continue through July 5.

Arrangements have been made in Carlisle for the Girl Scouts to pick up the books within the city while residents of the county are asked to bring their books to the room on the second floor of the court house which has been set aside for the library.

Persons having old books are urged to turn them in for the drive regardless of age or condition. Many of the books, judged not up to library standards, will be sold and the funds gained therefrom will be used to purchase books suitable for countywide circulation.

Persons who so desire may donate subscriptions to newspapers and magazines for use by the library, it has been pointed out.

Inasmuch as the campaign will be held over such a brief period of time persons are urged to have their books ready for delivery to library headquarters as quickly as possible.

Botulism Discovered In Nicholas Chickens

Evidences of Limber Neck (Botulism) has been found among Nicholas county chickens during the current County Agent W. T. Straw said he had been told by J. H. Sundys of the Stony Creek section, who had discovered the disease among his flock.

Straw said Sundys described the affected birds as being unable to hold up their heads, with the head being extended to the ground. Both young and old chickens have been affected.

Straw described limber neck as a condition that may be caused either from botulism or other kind of food poisoning. The source of the trouble, he said, may be caused by any of the following: spoiled canned foods, that have been thrown out, spoiled feed, putrid meat in which certain poison producing organisms are growing or of fly maghots which have bred in such material.

To control the situation, Straw advised a thorough search be made for any dead animals such as a rabbit, chicken, rat, lamb or some source of poisoned food such as spoiled feed, milk that has soured in a tin container or has been stored in a tin container or spoiled canned vegetables.

In treating the disease, affected adult birds may be given one-half a teaspoonful of Epsom salts or four teaspoonfuls of castor oil. Treatment should be prompt to neutralize the poison, Straw advised. Badly paralyzed birds may die or the paralysis may linger on for an indefinite time.

16 Snake Eggs Found In Old Locust Log

A clutch of 16 snake eggs, each approximately three-quarters of an inch in diameter, was found by Perry McClanahan, Wednesday while he was splitting wood on John Marshall's place.

Two of the eggs were brought to The Mercury office for inspection, but a rough, pebbly surface and one, when opened, indicated the presence of two unhatched baby snakes.

McClanahan said he found the clutch in a locust log whose only opening, before being split, was just a tiny bit larger than the diameter of a single egg. He said the eggs were identified as snake eggs by Tom Campbell.

Wildfire Is Spreading In State Leaf Fields

Wildfire is beginning to show up on a large scale in many tobacco fields throughout the state and threatens serious damage to the 1947 burley crop, Dr. W. D. Valleau, plant pathologist at the University of Kentucky Experiment Station, reported.

He said the disease is more pronounced than at any time in many years and that the "outbreak is the worst since I have been in state."

Cool and wet weather contributed to the intensity of the disease in plant beds during the spring, Dr. Valleau said, and the same type of unfavorable weather has stimulated the spread of wildfire in planted fields.

A solution of bluestone and lime will prevent the disease in plant beds, but this treatment is not practical after tobacco has been transplanted, Dr. Valleau pointed out.

Wildfire is a bacterial disease which spreads from the roots of plants to the leaves, causing the leaves to yellow, dry up and break off. It's particularly crippling to plants immediately after transplanting.

John Wells Discovers Heroin Cache In Mail

John Wells, mail clerk at the United States Public Health Service hospital, and a former postal employe of the Carlisle post office, was accredited with discovering a cache of heroin which had been mailed to a patient at the hospital.

The cache contained approximately 25 grains of heroin valued at $250 by Dr. Victor H. Vogel, medical officer in charge, who reported the discovery.

The heroin was wrapped in cigaret papers and concealed at the bottom of the envelope at the lower left corner. The flaps had been unglued and then glued together again.

Wells who intercepted the letter said it was "a little too thick at the folds."

An employe at the hospital since Oct. 16, 1935, shortly after it opened, Wells had been given a meritorious promotion several years ago for exceptional alertness. He is the son-in-law of Mrs. S. W. Keller.

Mrs. Albert Henry of near East Union remains a patient at the Mary Chiles hospital, Mt. Sterling, which she entered last Thursday as a medical patient.
