HOW MANY OF YOUR FRIENDS AND NEIGHBORS OWN K. U.?

REDDY KILOWATT
your electric servant

As of March 17, exactly 5,731 Kentuckians—farmers, machinists, school teachers, filling station operators and many retired couples—had savings invested with Kentucky Utilities Company.

They are your neighbors, your friends—folks who have loaned their money to build the power plants and to buy the poles, wire and transformers that deliver electricity to homes, farms and industries throughout our state.

Another 4,356 stockholders are scattered throughout 45 other states, and 20 more are living in foreign countries. All together, 10,107 persons share the ownership of K. U.

Such widespread ownership makes this company one of the most publicly owned industries in Kentucky—a truly public utility—owned and operated by Americans in the American way of doing business.

BALD HILL
(Laura O. Dotson, Cor.)

There is nothing occurring at Bald Hill out of the ordinary except the interest manifested in the terrible tragedy which has occurred in our neighboring community, Sugar Creek. Conrad, Dotson and Herndons visited the scene where the car was found Sunday morning. There were pedestrians coming and going to and from the scene and cars parked along the pike while others were also coming and going to and from the scene. While quite a crowd was gathered at the Laughlin home, Mrs. Max Ogden and daughter of Monticello, Ky., and Mrs. McKenney of Cincinnati, Mrs. Ida Bruce Osborne, Mr. Joe Shea and John Haigis of Cincinnati have been in and neighbors and friends are coming and going to lend aid and sympathy to the bereaved ones.
