WANTED—A JOB—ANY KIND OF WORK—NO LIMIT TO HOURS—NO PAY ACCEPTED

Who in the world would seek a job such as described above?

Hundreds do every year. Hundreds of splendid, intelligent, educated young women—some from our very finest families—are applying for just such jobs in the great Catholic Sisterhood.

"The poor ye have always with you," said our Lord, and in God's scheme of things, He has called to the service of His beloved poor the very flower of womanhood.

In this country alone there are more than 155,000 humble, holy women, joined by the common vows of poverty, chastity, obedience. Some of them teach in convent and parochial schools. Others care for impoverished old folks and orphans. Some nurse in hospitals, in homes for cancerous patients, in leper colonies, and midst shot and shell on the battlefields. Still others go about begging at restaurants, hotels, and other places for left-over food, with which to feed the hungry, making their own meals from the garbage pail for their charges. There is no work too difficult, too menial, too revolting for these angels on earth to undertake gladly for God through His poor, regardless of race, color, or creed. And they earn no money. They possess no earthly thing—not even the clothes they wear. Yet the Catholic Sister is ever-smiling, ever-happy, because she is the "Bride of Christ" and in all things His will is her will.

More than 155,000 nuns in this country alone! What a tremendous spiritual asset! How much would it cost in money and results to replace them with paid workers, who could not, and would not, labor with the same devotion and disinterestedness?

Beware of the story of the "escaped" nun. There can be no such thing. Any Sister may freely leave any convent at any time. Beware of him who spreads such poisonous lies, for he is vicious by striking at our country's bravest and those who are very, very close to the Sacred Heart of Jesus.

If it's anything Catholic, ask a Catholic.

The Creative Power of Faith

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for October 19 is Hebrews 11:31; Genesis 12:1-9, the Memory Verse being Isaiah 12:2, "I will trust, and will not be afraid: for Jehovah, even Jehovah, is my strength."

FAITH MEANS a belief or trust in someone, in his honesty and truth; or in God. We have faith in God when we do not doubt when adversity comes, but have trust that we can depend on His promise to see us through. His power to give us and do other things just because we have this faith, and by it can do more than ordinary human beings who do not have it.

Paul, a prisoner when he wrote this epistle, calls on those to whom he is writing to remember the faith of the saints of the Old Testament and to emulate it. "Now faith, confidence of things hoped for, the substance of things not seen, the evidence of things not seen."

By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice, and by faith he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts: and he, being dead, yet speaketh.

By faith Enoch was translated that he should not see death; and was not found, because God had translated him: for before his translation he had this witness, that he pleased God.

By faith Noah, being warned of God thing as yet seen, moved with fear, prepared the ark in spite of the unbelief and probable derision of his friends and neighbors, by the which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith.

Abraham Has Faith

Abraham, living in Ur, was "called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance," and he "obeyed; and he went out, not knowing whither he went."

His faith led him to a strange country, "dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise . . . for he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God."

Consider also Abraham's wonderful faith in God when he was ordered to offer up his son, Isaac, as a sacrifice. God had told him that through this son of his, Abraham would establish a nation and that Isaac must have sons to fulfill this prophecy. He fully believed that Isaac would live, and he had faith to offer him, this fire, promising boy, because God had told him to. His faith, too, was justified, because as angel intervened and the boy was saved.

By faith when Jacob was dying, he blessed both the sons of Joseph. Likewise, when Joseph died, he made mention of the departure of the children of Israel (from Egypt), "and gave commandment concerning his bones."

When Moses was born, in that time of peril, his parents knew "he was a proper child; and they were not afraid of the king's commandment."

Later when Moses was grown and realized to what dreadful condition his people had fallen, he refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter, choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season."

By faith he forsook Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the king; for he endured, as seeing Him who is invisible.

Faith of the Passover

"Through faith he kept the passover, and the sprinkling of blood, lest he that destroyed the firstborn should touch them.

"By faith they passed through the Red Sea as by dry land: which the Egyptians assaying to do were drowned.

"By faith the walls of Jericho fell down, after they were compassed about seven days."

And what shall I say more?" Paul asks, referring to the many who had faith in the olden days, to Gedeon, Samson, David and Samuel, of women who through faith received their dead raised to life and others who were tortured, while still others were stoned, were sawn asunder, were tempted, or were slain with the edge of the sword: they wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins; being destitute, afflicted, tormented;

"Remember them that are in bonds, as bound with them; and them which suffer adversity, as being yourselves also in the body. . . .

"Let your conversation be without covetousness; and be content with such things as ye have: for He hath said, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee.

"So that we may boldly say, The Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man shall do unto me."

East Union Homemakers

The "Rearranging of Furniture" was the topical study for the October meeting, at the home of Mrs. Thelma Lynam, a new member. The lesson was presented by Mrs. Henry Bramblett, assisted by Mrs. Kenneth Stephenson and Miss Dorothy Rowe, and created a new interest along this line by all present. Two groups demonstrated the lesson and gave reasons for all changes made.

Mrs. John Barrett, president, had charge of the business meeting. The devotional was conducted by Mrs. John A. Wallale, who also read a paper on revising the Constitution, and several others gave reasons for and against it. Miss Rowe told of plans for the annual meeting to be held October 16 at the Carlisle Baptist church.

Ten members were present, with two new members, Mrs. Ollie Dale, and Mrs. Otis McCarty, and three visitors, Mrs. John Stephenson, Mrs. Elmer Ritchie and Mrs. Ira Haney.

The next meeting will be November 14 at the home of Mrs. Cal Smith.

Farmer Furnishes Community Water

Laying 1,600 feet of pipe, Herschel Evans, a farmer of Graves county, is furnishing water to 16 families in the Farmington community from his 170-foot deep well, equipped with electric pump and 600-gallon tank. Because of the improved water supply, several families are installing bathrooms. Mrs. Evans, a member of the Farmington Homemakers Club, told Home Agent Claudia Weinman that people don't know what they've missed until they've had running water in their homes, and then they wouldn't be without it.

PRAIRIE GUNS

By E.E. HALLERAN

CHAPTER VI

Tooker whistled. "Lord! You have been out cold! It's been half an hour since we came rearing and our herb to help you. How did you hurt?"

"Not a scratch as far as I know, I reckon I lit on my head when the horse stopped a slug. How did the fight come out?"

"It didn't amount to much. The dam' jayhawkers lit out pronto when our boys bore down on 'em. We chased them a piece but circled back to look for you. Sure you're all right?"

"Just a bit groggy. Feel like I've been astiff' hospital."

Tooker ranged his mount in beside Donovan. "Give me your hand and climb up here behind me. I reckon you saved us a peck of trouble by stopping them cowboy polecats out here away from the herd."

He wheeled his pony as Terry climbed up and took a precarious seat behind the saddle. "Lord, you stout on a bit and see what's what. I'll take Donovan back to camp and see how many pieces are missing."

Terry grinned back the waves of pain which had come with the effort of mounting. "You might look for a couple of dead rannies out there, Hank," he suggested. "Seems like I remember a couple of them hitting the dirt just before I took my dive. Maybe they didn't wake up as quick as I did."

Tooker grunted approval. "Got a couple, did you? Any idea who they were?"

"Nope—but there was one voice I'll remember if I ever hear it again. The loss raider had a voice like a bull."

It was dawn when Terry roused to the shout of "Grub pile!" Tooker eyed him anxiously as he sat up, stretching tentatively.

"How do you feel by this time, kid?" he asked. "Still groggy?"

Terry managed a smile. "You'll spoil me, boss. A cowpoke ain't supposed to get hurt by falling off a horse. Then I've got a job for you. You're going along with me this skeleton. I've a notion we oughta look the town over before we run the herd in."

"Why? Do you think there will be another attack near town?"

"No. At least not like this last one. The trouble is we may run into something that's harder to fight. After you went to sleep Hank came in to report a couple of dead homesteaders on the prairie. They look like nesters and there's a good chance that some kind of low business will be into us."

He swung to face the men around the fire. "Let's have everybody get out our story straight, boys. This whole layout smells out loud and we've got to watch sharp that they don't frame anything on us. Our story is that we heard shooting last night but we didn't go out to investigate. We threw every man into extra guard duty and didn't let anybody leave the herd. We were no busy looking out for our own interests that we don't know a thing about what happened out there. We figure maybe it was a couple of lots of jayhawkers running afoul of each other. Don't add anything to that; just play dumb."

There was a chorus of assent but Terry asked, "How about my gun and bronc? They're both out there somewhere and the pony will have the Frying Pan's horse brand on him."

Tooker grinned. "We took care of that. Here's your gun. If anybody finds the pony they'll have to dig him up along with the two dead rustlers—which ain't likely because we did a mighty fine job of burying. I don't think even Indians could find the graves."

"Fair enough," Terry agreed, taking his empty six gun. "I just wanted to make sure."

Tooker nodded shortly and went on. "The trouble is we may run into something that's harder to fight. After you went to sleep Hank came in to report a couple of dead homesteaders on the prairie. They look like nesters and there's a good chance that some kind of low business will be into us."

He swung to face the men around the fire. "Let's have everybody get
