Down On The Farm

DDT Gets Fleas

B. C. Clark of East Union, reports that fleas bewilder, so had to his barns that he could stand the ination no longer. "To have Cleaning the farm livestock, is bad," said Clark, "but when the fleas got after Clark and myself, that was unbearable, so we sought a remedy." Clark enquired of a remedy from County Agent Straw.

Straw informed that DDT is very successful in controlling fleas as well as many other insects on the farm. Nine pounds of 50 percent wettable powder DDT was mixed in 50 gallons of water and applied with a borrel type sprayer. The barns were thoroughly sprayed in a short time and the flea problem has disappeared, Clark said.

4-H Club Boys Learn About The City

While attending the livestock judging contest at the Kentucky State Fair, three Nicholas County boys learned much about the city way of living as well as furthering their study of livestock. Three boys, Jimmie Judge, Buddy Buckley and Dorvey Watkins, while in Louisville, stayed at the Kentucky Hotel, where they enjoyed riding on the hotel elevator and talking to the hotel manager about conditions back on the farm. The manager was impressed with these boys because they showed interest in learning more about the city of Louisville, and especially what made the elevator work.

Furniture Arrangement

"Furniture Arranged For Use" was the subject of discussion at the homemakers project leaders' training school held at the home of Mrs. Everett Stephenson, September 9, by Miss Venice Loveday, home furnishings specialist, University of Kentucky, and assisted by Mrs. Fay C. Rowe, home demonstration agent.

Miss Loveday told the group that the simplest furniture, when comfortably and pleasingly arranged, takes on an air of hospitality and livableness. The ideal home is formed around the particular interests of its members. The project leaders present at this meeting will give this lesson at their respective homemakers' club meetings this month. Eight homemakers clubs were represented at this training school.
