Capitol Comments

I have always advocated a system of information that will enable legislators to know in advance what bills may be introduced, what legislation may be brought up for passage, and what important factors should be considered at each session. If they know in advance—which they should—they can have a chance to talk to their constituents back in their own counties and get their reaction and ideas on laws to be passed. That, in my estimation, is a representative system of government.

As it is now they come to Frankfort like babes in the woods, each with some bill of his own that someone in his town or county has asked him to sponsor. One of the others may be aware of the bill and a few may realize the importance of it. It may be introduced as House Resolution and was and passed upon most unanimously without anyone knowing how important it is. Why can't we have aides each election some group as the Statutes Revision Committee or some such group appointed by the Governor to accept potentional bills, put them in their proper legal form, and send them out to all the elected Representatives and Senators for consideration. If this was done, they would have time to think them over, to talk them over with their voters back home, and could act on them constructively when they came to the legislative halls at Frankfort. There is no necessity of a 60-day session. It is a question of convening and adjourning. All the work that will be done at this session could, in an emergency, be done in 10 days time, and yet more than 150 able and capable people will be kept away from their homes and their businesses in order to fulfill the constitutional requirements of a legislative session.

Going back to House Resolution seven as an example, I have every sympathy with the relatives of the victims of the Strait Creek coal mine disaster. Coal mining at its best is a hazardous occupation. No matter how much a miner earns, in my estimation, he is underpaid because more than 2,000 miners a year are killed while mining coal. The risk involved certainly deserves high wages. But why should the state pay $100,000 to recover bodies that have already been buried more than two years? It would only bring fresh grief to the relatives and what better burial place can a person have than where he works? If you could give this money to the relatives of these 20 men, it might do some good, but the constitution of the State of Kentucky forbids that. What god will it do to dig up these 20 men if you can find them, and reinury them in the same ground in the same county? If the State had millions of surplus money to throw away, it would still be foolish, but when everyone recognizes the necessity or economy in a state government that may have already overestimated its income, when there is a crying need in the Welfare Department for more funds, when the schools of the State are desperately in need of more money, when the old age and dependent children are suffering for lack of funds, why spend $100,000 to satisfy a Union lobby? Last week in the House, House Resolution seven was passed by a vote of 75 to 2. I don't believe half of the representatives who voted for this realized what it was. I can't possibly believe that people representing their home counties and the citizens of Kentucky could thinkingly vote to waste $100,000. But this is literally what happened. I think that each citizen should write his Representative requesting that he reconsiders this vote and when it gets to the Senate it should be killed in committee.

The budget bill providing for an $11,000,000 building fund will enable Governor Clements to repair a mistake that would have been costly to the State. Under the present set-up, it is now possible for him, if he cares to do so, to combine the Centralized Compensation Building and the Court of Appeals Building on the location back of the Capitol and thus save the taxpayers of the State more than a million dollars. Knowing the Governor as I do, I believe that this will be done. It will not only save the extra cost of a second building but will save thousands of dollars a year in heating, electricity, and messenger service and will make available additional space in the new Capitol building that is much needed.

RANDOM SHOTS—The cold weather over the State has caused much suffering, closed many schools and kept many children in rural areas from getting to the schools. We need a better transportation system and better roads and this administration plans on giving these things to the State. —The present plan for an agricultural and industrial development set-up for the State is a good one and I think will get results. The Governor plans on appropriating $200,000 for this fund. Other states spend much more with less to advertise. At the Press Association meeting in Louisville the Minister of Publicity from Ontario brought out the fact that tourists should be Kentucky's greatest industry. He said that with our historical romantic traditions, our points of interest, and our State giving, we should publicize to the world Kentucky's attractions and the tourists who flocked in would bring tremendous revenue to the State.
