Farmers Take Long Look at 1949 In Making Plans for Extra Cash

By IRA MILLER
Farm Electrification Bureau

What should the farmer do with his boom time profits? Invest in more land? Buy more stock? Put more or spend it to raise his family's standard of living? These questions are uppermost in the minds of many indebtedness is greatly reduced and their incomes lately have been high. From their standpoint, it makes sense to spend the extra cash for conveniences, comfort and shorter working hours.

The Agricultural Committee on Postwar Planning of the Edison Electric Institute has made plans, improve the house as well as the barn and give more than the children still himself a break.

By nature, farmers are hard working people. They have to be. For farming is a hard job. But it has been getting increasingly easier for them to "make" a living. Especially since this "making" of farm work believe in electricity. The owning of the highline has worked wonders, for it has brought to the farm a tireless "extra hired hand" who performs stress of production and household chores, around-the-clock, at the mere flick of a switch. Electricity, however, still isn't being used to anything like a maximum extent. For example, only 38% of our farm homes had running water as of 1947, while just 20% had bathrooms. In a production way, many farmers still milk by hand and haul hay with the aid of an unmechanical team or expensive tractor power.

Yes, scores of farmers still have a long road to travel before their postwar steads are equal, in a modernization way, to the unimaginable beauty of all outdoors which, to a great extent, is their workroom. However, 1949 is another year. And if farm families follow the counsel of their leaders, traditional rural living and working habits are due for a change. Leisure will be mixed well with work, for time (and labor) saving devices will be installed to take over many tedious chores. And the "extra dollars" (energy = cash) will be put "to work in town" which another wants when it comes time for dad to retire.

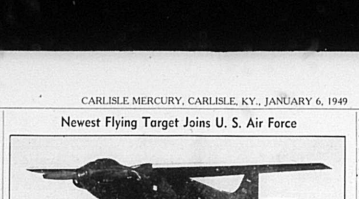
WHILE THEY WORK — Farmers are planning for 1949.

farm families as they take a long, penetrating look into 1949.

For most of them, 1948 was a great year. Collectively, they had an estimated gross income of about $41,200,000,000—the highest on record. Unless all studies go astray, it will be $1,000,000,000 more than in 1947. Farming, as a business, is in the "in the money." And here's what the experts have to say about the situation:

"Many farm people of the United States are in better financial condition than they ever have been. Their

Newest Flying Target Joins U. S. Air Force



The OQ-19A, newest, biggest and fastest of the USAF's radio-controlled flying targets perches on its 4th-foot retractor prior to take off. The monoplane, powered by a four-cylinder motor and with a 12-foot wing span, can fly up to 220 miles an hour. At a 220-yard range it appears as a "normal-size fighter plane flying at 500 yards distance. It is landed safely by a 32-foot cargo-type parachute.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Sacrament" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday.

The Golden Text is: "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit with in me." (Ps. 51:10)

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Observe the ordinances of Abib, and keep the pass-over unto the Lord thy God: for in the month of Abib the Lord God brought thee forth out of Egypt by night." (Deut. 16:1-3)

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, Science and Health with key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Jesus' history made a new calendar, which we call the Christian era, and established an ritualistic worship. He knew that men must be baptized, partake of the Eucharist, support the clergy, observe the Sabbath, make long prayers, and yet be sensual and sinful." (P. 20)

Old 'Corn Kings' Lose To Moderns

The old corn kings who have been champions by following Dad's methods have been snowed under by contestants in the corn derby contest in Taylor county, stated Farm Agent C. V. Bryan. Less plowing, use of level land and treating it the same as for tobacco have resulted in a 5 to 10-percent increase in production, he said.

Editor of the new department is E. W. Kleckhefer, above. Farm editor for the Minneapolis Star and Tribune for several years, Kleckhefer was selected because of his excellent qualifications. Prior to working for the Star and Tribune, Kleckhefer was an agricultural expert for the United Press. He was awarded a Nuenan Fellowship at Harvard in 1942 and studied agricultural economics there under Dr. John Black, noted in that field. He has won several prizes on farm editorials, and was a founder of the Minneapolis Farm Forum. He is a member of the American Farm Economic association.

In announcing the appointment of the farm editor, Barry Bingham, president of The Courier-Journal said:

"Kentuckiana is an agricultural region, and the welfare of every resident depends to an important degree on healthy and prosperous farm conditions. The Courier-Journal wants to contribute to that prosperity through the medium of fuller and more comprehensive farm news. This is the reason we have appointed a farm editor, a thoroughly trained man for the job. Our readers will help us direct his work by their own suggestions, so that he can give them the news material they want and need."

A NEW FARM DEPARTMENT, designed to provide fuller and more comprehensive agricultural news, will be added to The Courier-Journal beginning January 24. The department, made up of one or more pages, will appear Monday of each week in the regular editions of The Courier-Journal.

Trophy Given 4-H Strawberry Grower

The first trophy to be awarded a strawberry project champion in Jefferson county was given to Miss Mary Lee Kaufman of the Fern Creek 4-H Club for her 1948 project. Miss Kaufman started her berry patch in April, 1947, when she set out 1,000 Tennessee Beauty plants contributed by the Id Matthews Produce Exchange and the Highlands Kiwanis club on a return-plant project plan. She produced 29 crates of berries, sold 250 plants and returned 1,000 plants to be awarded other members. Her fourteen acre $295 patch per paying cost of fertilizer, labor for picking and other expenses. Miss Kaufman also planted a new patch of berries for harvesting in 1949, along with the original plantings.

Wolfe Farmers Reap Good Leaf Returns

According to their own statement, the majority of Wolfe county farmers are "sitting pretty" as far as their tobacco crops are concerned, notes Farm Agent Charles E. Gabbard. Their records show that more than 800,000 pounds of tobacco were produced as a result of better methods of farming and a favorable season. Mr. Gabbard cites the case of Robert Sewell of Campton, who produced 4,348 pounds of Ky.-Tenn. on 1.8 acres, or a yield of 2,415 pounds an acre. Total expenses, including stripping, were $600. Mr. Sewell turned wench under, and used 1,500 pounds of commercial fertilizer and 150 pounds of ammonium nitrate to the acre.

Suggests Dehorning Cattle While Young

Most farmers dehorn cattle, unless they plan to put them in the showring. Cattle with horns may be dangerous, and they sometimes injure one another, causing mutilis and other troubles.

The best and most humane time to dehorn is when calves are young and before the horns show through the skin, suggests Dr. Ross Brown of the College of Agriculture and Home Economics, University of Kentucky. He recommends two dehorning products.

One is a paste containing 32 percent of caustic soda with calcium hydroxide. Another product, recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture, contains 25 percent of caustic potash, 25 percent of caustic soda and 65 percent of U. S. P. baby-ble colfodion.

After the horn has grown through the skin it is necessary to dip a saw or clipper to remove it. It may be necessary to arrange to control bleeding. Smear 62 should be applied if there are flies when dehorning is done.

If cattle are running on sweet clover they should be taken off a few days before dehorning; otherwise they will bleed excessively, or even to death.

Fertilization Pays

Keigh Allen, 18-year-old 4-H club member in Carlisle county, proved that fertilization of corn pays. In the center of his father's corn field, he treated a three-acre plot, using 200 pounds per acre of commercial fertilizer. Then the entire field was splanted and cultivated alike. At harvest time, young Allen's fertilized plot yielded 83.6 bushels of corn to the acre, while the remainder of the field produced only 54 bushels an acre.

Finds Out About Big Corn Yields

It takes to make big corn yields was demonstrated on a plot of creek bottom land in Garrard county in April, 1947, when the bid corn produced 201 bushels per acre at 25 percent moisture. Farmers must have good land, plenty of rainfall, a thick stand of corn and a good adapted hybrid, stated Farm Agent Raymond G. Hoskins. He further explained that the rows in this particular plot were 36 inches wide, with the stalks varying from 66 to 108 per 100 feet of row, and ears of corn were turned under as a cover crop and 6-8-6 fertilizer was used at the rate of 1,000 pounds per acre.

Cattle and Tobacco Pay Boyle 4-H Boy

Paul Rankin of Boyle county cowned 10 years of 4-H Club work by winning the 1948 state championship in baby beef production and thereby earning for himself a trip to Chicago Nov. 27 to Dec. 3 to attend the National 4-H Club Congress and Livestock Exposition. His income from baby beeves during the 10-year period totaled $11,594.

During this time, young Rankin fed 34 calves, and now has eight registered Angus cows and two heifers. He is holding back two calves to feed next year, a practice from which he has consistently made a good profit, said Farm Agent John F. Brown.

The five calves fed during the past year made an average gain of 653 pounds. Rankin's records showed he fed 8.7 pounds of grain for each pound of gain. The calves fed on pasture for 153 days and were given a small amount of hay.

In addition to producing beef, Rankin has also made $6,470 from 211 acres of tobacco and realized $325 in profits making a total income of $18,389.

Makes Pasture From Bush and Weed Land

From a poor pasture grown up in bushes and weeds to a good one in eight months time, grazing 30 beef cows and calves on it, is the history of a 9-acre field owned by Leon Grigsby of Bullitt county. Farm Agent H. E. Rothwell reported that Mr. Grigsby cleared off the underbrush in March and disked the field, seeding it with a mixture of redtop, brome grass, Ky. 31 fescue and lespedeza. He applied 300 pounds of superphosphate to the acre. The field was mowed three times to keep bushes and weeds down, and was pastured lightly during the summer.
