Good Methods Bring Paying Fruit Crops

B. N. Harris of Turkey Creek in Pike county, long a cooperator with the Agricultural Extension Service of the University of Kentucky, cites his own records to show what can be done in fruit production when good methods are followed.

In 1947, he followed a spray schedule on his apple orchard of 1,000 trees and realized $2,200. The following year no spraying was done, and only $400 worth of apples was sold. This year, he again carried out a spraying program, and also applied five pounds of nitrate of soda to every tree. To date, his income is above any previous year, and it is expected to reach $3,000. All apples sold for $2 a bushel, buyers bringing their own baskets.

Fifteen years ago, Mr. Harris set out 150 trees of the Golden Delicious, Rome Beauty and Winesap varieties on 2½ acres of hillside land valued at $25 an acre. For the first three years, he cultivated between the trees, but since that time lespedeza and red clover have replaced the cultivated crops. His records show that the spraying, including labor, cost less than $50 a year.

"October's Bright Blue Weather"

O sums and skies and clouds of June,
And flowers of June together,
Ye cannot rival for one hour
October's bright blue weather.

When loud the bumblebee makes haste,
Belated, thriftless vagrant,
And Golden Rod is dying fast,
And lanes with grapes are fragrant.

When Gentians roll their fringes tight,
To save them for the morning,
And chestnuts fall from satin burrs
Without a bit of warning.

When on the ground red apples lie
In piles like jewels shining,
And redder still on old stone walls
Are leaves of woodbine twining.

When all the lovely wayside things
Their white-winged seeds are sowing,
And in the fields, still green and fair,
Late aftermaths are growing.

When springs run low, and on the brooks
In idle golden freighting,
Bright leaves sink noiseless in the bush
Of woods, for winter waiting.

When comrades seek sweet country haunts
By twos and twos together,
And count like misers, hour by hour,
October's bright blue weather.

O sum and skies and flowers of June,
Count all your boasts together,
Ye cannot rival for one hour
October's bright blue weather.

Miss Margaret I. King, for 39 years librarian at the University of Kentucky has been placed on change of duty status in accordance with the school's policy concerning age and length of service. During her tenure, Miss King built the U. K. library from one that could be housed in a single room to one that now contains nearly a half-million volumes and is recognized as one of the South's largest and best. The structure last year was named the Margaret I. King library in honor of Miss King's long and distinguished period of service.
