. . . But Who You Play The Game

How many saw the Carlisle-M. M. I. basketball game in Millersburg last Friday night?

Notice anything different about the game? If you were in attendance, we think that you must have been aware of the sportsmanship, or not only on the part of the players, but, more especially, the attitude of the rooting section composed of the M. M. I. student body.

It is always with a great deal of pleasure that we watch the Cadets engage in athletic contests. They don't always win; more often, in recent years, they have lost a lot of their games. But, win or lose, they give an account of themselves that is crowd-pleasing to see and heartwarming to the most unathletic-minded person.

It is impossible for every team to be a winner, but it is not impossible for fans to display the same sportsmanship like conduct that our local teams show when they take the floor against opponents. More often than not, the team makes a better showing than the supporters. Many times Lady Luck has been bashed officials and otherwise given unfavorable accounts of themselves that reflect upon the team, the coach, school and town.

Truly, it is hard to support a team that loses the majority of its ball games. It is only natural for people to want to see a winning first. But anytime a team takes the floor, they are a potential winner. Local fives may not go to the state tournament this year, but, in any case, they give creditable performances.

Keep in mind, no matter how hard it may be for you to watch Carlisle or Nicholas County lose, it is far more difficult for the players to lose, game after game, especially when the so-called "crowd" amounts to only a handful or people.

Basketball draws even larger crowds, nationally speaking, than any other athletic event. There's a lot of color and spirit in evidence, be it in a cracker-box gymnasium or in Madison Square Garden. The play, though often heated, is clean and wholesome entertainment.

On foreign courts our town and county are often only represented by our ball clubs, and by their conduct we are judged accordingly. Remember, your team is at all times trying to win for you. They don't play to lose. Give them your support by attending the home games—maybe that's the shot in the arm they need. We don't think they'll let you down.

Local News On Every Page

Every week we get a request from some individual or organization to "please put this story on the front page where people will see it."

This strikes us as being rather funny. You see, the average weekly reader covers the whole paper. As a matter of fact, he usually glances casually at the front page, turns to the locals and reads them, and then slowly makes his way through the paper back to the front page.

You can't "bury" an item in a weekly because the reader will search it out wherever it may be.

Frankly, we have always felt that every sheet should have a page 1 that is worthy of the name, but it is not impossible for fans to display the same sportsmanship like conduct that our local teams show when they take the floor against opponents. More often than not, the team makes a better showing than the supporters. Many times Lady Luck has been bashed officials and otherwise given unfavorable accounts of themselves that reflect upon the team, the coach, school and town.

Oh, The Fifth That Floats Across The Front Pages Of Our Dailies

Can it be that so many folks like a daily diet of fifth that daily papers feel called on to furnish it all seasoned up with a picture or is the mess something repulsive to a larger segment of folks than the newspapers are aware?

We trust that the latter is the case. What cares a rap to see the picture of this or that swipe or thrice divorced Hollywood hat that puts off one husband to take on another. Surely folks have seen and heard enough about the sin of some creature who shipped herself to Italy to have an illegitimate baby.

The sin of it all is those oft repeated sordid stories makes our young girls feel that such conduct is all right and acceptable. There is at least one daily paper in the country above prostituting a calling by glorifying common sinners.—Harrodsburg Herald.

There's A Power

There is a power infinitely greater than atomic power and the atomic power is subject to human limitations. The power of prayer is available without limitation. A God-fearing nation, unitedly believing in and excersising the power of prayer, need have no reason to fear any foe, either from within or beloind its borders. Jesus Himself said: "What things sower ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them."—Sentinel-Democrat

JEST AMONG US . . .

By Jack Wild
UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY

How times change—or do they? The following letters from a German appeared in the annual issue of the University of Kentucky Kiki in the year 1907:

"Dear Pa—I have gotten settled down in the dormitory and know a good many of the fellows. I am very well and hope you and Ma are the same.

"I am still wearing my old suit of clothes. They are rather shabby, but that is all right as I don't see anybody but the boys. They have receptions at the churches every Friday night for the new students, but I don't suppose I'll go on account of my clothes. But I suppose it's best anyhow as I can spend that time studying. A man of clothes good enough for me would cost about $14.98 and it wouldn't be right to spend all that much money.

"All the boys' mothers send them boxes of cake and stuff to eat, to keep in their rooms. It is mighty nice. I guess a lot of fellers do not get any. The boys all loaf in the rooms of those who have boxes but I know Ma has too much to do, to spend her time on me when I'm not there, so I eat all the boys later anyhow, maybe.

"Pa, I feel that people have said about my clothes and tell me not to think anything about what I read about the Ku Klux, best wishes for all. I remain your son, Willie.

One Week Later

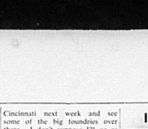
Dear Pa—I received your letter some weeks and also the box from Ma. Thank you very much for the six pairs of socks. I had worn out all clothes and will wear it Friday night.

Nearly all the boys I know are going to take girls but I don't suppose I will as you have to get a girl from a good family or no when you can have just as good a time if I reckon, without taking a girl, but if you do take a girl, you are sure to get invited to the next one, but I don't make any difference with me. I'm invited or not.

Some of the boys are going to Cincinnati next week and see some of the big foundries over there. I don't suppose I'll go as it costs five dollars and I don't reckon you've got the money. It will do the boys a whole lot of good, but I reckon I can pass my examination without going.

Well goodbye, love to all, your dutiful son, Willie.

If the Sphinx Could Only Answer



Fight for Freedom

Lesson for February 19, 1950.

THERE ARE TWO KINDS of problems with living things. One is the kind of problem caused by its growing too fast; the other is the problem caused by not growing fast enough. The early church had problems of both kinds. The first kind of problem, at any rate it was taking in a lot of members, many of whom the older Christians found strange. At first Christians were Jews, no one else. But in Antioch, and even in Jerusalem, the church spread westward Dr. Foreman and Gentiles were converted. Naturally, the Christian churches were not all alike, and they varied from here, just as they are today.

Southern Folklore

By Dr. Gordon Wilson

B. A. Botkin, who made such a hit with his "Treasury of American Folklore," has recently added another volume to the series, "A Treasury of Southern Folklore." I was impressed by the fact that a great deal of Southern folklore was found in south Georgia, Alabama and Kentucky, of course these areas were settled by people from the South, but one might suppose that they left their distinctive folklore would not grow here. The assumption is borne out by the contributions to be found in these stories. I have long been interested in the study of the demarkation between southern Indiana and southern Kentucky in their customs and traditions, most people think that the line of demarkation between the two states.

Some Southerner could run a column for an indefinite time by asking readers to send in stories where many of their customs came from. The contributions might surprise them. Some of these stories I have mentioned are concerned with the speech of the southern states. Hot biscuits are not found in the Old South, even grits, a fat Southern food, can be found outside its confines. Virginia sugar-cured hams are no more distinctive of Virginia than of many a place farther north.

For several years my office has been out where the ball from another professor who are treated on southern Wisconsin. We often exchange farms stories, particularly of the traditional type. It was not too long after I came to know him that I discovered that we were hearing had been almost identical, that we had heard the same narrative yarns, that we called by different names. Emelle I discovered had his section in Wisconsin had had as its first settlers a group of people from Cane Crk. Kentucky. On the other hand another professor of my acquaintance in Indiana, an entirely different vocabularies for words that seldom get into a dignified dictionary. Some of his words I have never heard elsewhere, but he assures me that he had never heard any other. His people had come from the East to Michigan not from the South.

For years I have tried to pick out the specific things that give a Southern flavor. Thus far I am not ready to report many areas. The South is a very big place, with about as many types of customs and language as could be dreamed of. Facile generalizations are not typical things, seem to think that all Southerners are alike in speech and manners. There are a few things, usually not mentioned, that make most of us south of Mason and Dixon's Line somewhat alike, but, as I said earlier in this essay, those very things also show up in other areas as leftovers of a time that might easily be called Pre-Southern.

The almost universal use of "you all" is one of the few things that single out the South as a whole. "Reckon" is rather distinctive, but it has many a synonym in the South, probably "allow" being nearly as common. Even "calculate," supposed to be

Mrs. Edna Howe Blount, wife of Rob Blount, died at a Lexington hospital early Saturday morning, Feb. 25. Mrs. Edna Howe Blount, as she was familiarly called by her friends, was a talented dramatist of her life in this community. Endowed with a pleasing personality and a friendly disposition, she loved people and she loved life. Her death came after her health permitted was always good. She was active in the community and active in the work of the church. She had been in declining health for several years, the loving care and devotion of her husband will always be an inspiration to his friends and relatives. Funeral services were held at the Christian church by Rev. A. R. Robertson, a former pastor of the Lexington road and Rev. To the bereaved husband and children we extend our heart felt sympathy.
