Advises Early Ordering Of Farm Fertilizers

Growing concern over the slow movement of fertilizers and the potash strike has lead some manufacturers to adopt a policy that all orders for future shipment are subject to the goods being available at the time of shipment.

"Only by ordering fertilizers now for immediate shipment will the farmer be assured of having plenty on hand at planting time," say leading fertilizer manufacturers.

Many farmers have shared the opinion that mixed fertilizers would be plentiful during the coming spring season, but authoritative sources point out two important factors which might cause a serious fertilizer situation.

"1. Lack of interest on the part of farmers in taking early delivery of fertilizers. If the anticipated amount of mixed fertilizers is used this spring, it will be next to impossible for the industry to meet these requirements unless deliveries begin immediately. Most fertilizer plants can ship good, well-cured goods now, but these must be moved out to make room for additional materials coming in. If every farmer postpones his order the delivery season will be shortened, causing factories to become crowded and shipments to be delayed. Shipping orders can be handled promptly at this time; therefore farmers are urged to order now so they will have plenty of fertilizer on hand at planting time.

2. Potash supply. Three of the major potash producers have been idle since November 19, because of a labor strike. No settlement has been reached, although negotiations have been underway for some time. A considerable production of this important plant food has been lost, and each day the strike continues lessens the amount of potash that will be available in time for use this spring. Actually, a serious potash shortage has developed."

Summer Program Being Planned At Transylvania

A unique program is being planned for the 1950 summer session at Transylvania College, it was announced by Dr. Raymond F. McLain, Transylvania president.

High points of the summer plan will be a summer theatre and drama workshop; a three-weeks course in folk-dance and folk-music, an art course featuring sketches and illustrations, a one-week clinic for choir directors, and a possible resumption of the Transylvania Pan-Hellenic Tour. The programs will be carried on in addition to the regular academic summer quarter.

The summer theatre, possibly the most ambitious project, will be under the direction of Robert Challenger, head of the school's drama and speech department. Designed primarily for those who desire practical training in theatrical production, the program will handle only a selected 35 or 40 students who have enrolled especially for the course. Four plays will be produced in the course of eight weeks and a total of 15 quarter-hour credits may be earned.

The folk-dance and folk-music workshop will be under the direction of Mrs. McLain, who has a wide-spread reputation in that field. The Choirmasters' Clinic will be an expansion of a clinic held by Transylvania in many communities in the past three years, and will be headed by a leading person in the field.

Fritz Kriedgl, world-renowned book illustrator, will conduct the art course in the summer program.

"TIS KENTUCKY"

Jack Greenwood in Trimble Democrat

Where the finest horses are bred,
'Tis Kentucky
Where one wildest Indians bled,
'Tis Kentucky
Where women are just dandy,
Whiskey tastes like candy,
And a gun comes in handy,
'Tis Kentucky

Wise'e basketball reigns supreme,
'Tis Kentucky
Where football is no longer a dream,
'Tis Kentucky
In the garden spot of cavortin',
So now I am reportin'—
When it comes to down right sportin',
'Tis Kentucky

When it comes to rising early,
'Tis Kentucky
When it comes to raising barley,
'Tis Kentucky
Taint all good as a rule,
Some of it goes to the pool,
Still it keeps the kids in school—
'Tis Kentucky

Where you meet the kindest folks—
'Tis Kentucky
Where you hear the funniest jokes,
'Tis Kentucky
Where she kindly says "you all,"
Help you up when you fall,
And they're always on the ball—
'Tis Kentucky
