Memorial Day Address

small part, but a powerful and integral part, of the continents that go to make up the world that we know today.

"We are standing today at the crossroads. This is merely a restatement of what many have said recently, and that which is true. The course that we choose in the days now can be destructive of the good brought about in the past years ago. We can choose the one that will assure destiny of the strong moral forces that makes life precious and worth living. We can choose that other course and make for ourselves, and for those who follow, an even greater nation, as free a nation as that of the past, the latter choice we can open up to the people of America and to many nations of the world, a prosperity and a happiness unequalled in history.

"Let us pursue, very briefly, the former course, or maybe it is better to say, let us take inventory. There are those nations that apparently are determined to destroy us from within. They are our greatest enemies. Their plan is the same as that of the termite that works unceasingly, and unseen, on the foundations or the pillars of our homes. They are not only a more dangerous enemy than those without our borders, but they are a secretive enemy. We would receive the protection of a democratic government and while receiving that protection, destroy its very substance. They give the modern Benedict Arnolds, but they have a cloak of protection that Arnold did not have living in a different age. It seems that people whose duty it was during that time to be vigilant, were not confused by a cross-fire of certain so-called civil rights that seemed to days to cloud and blur our thinking and our objectives. Those whose duty it was at that time to mete out justice, and to meet the charges of security, did so with a clearer vision. The question to be decided regarding the accused was he for or was he against the fundamental form of government as outlined and written in our Declaration of Independence and in the Bill of Rights? One thing that appears to hold for them, too those whose duty it is to guard our security, is the thought that, regardless of the line of thinking of accused, has the unalienable right to preach his doctrine, regardless of how unsecure, or how unstable it might make our present form of international—inter-nation government. It seems that it can correctly be said that he is given this right even though it would destroy the very foundation of our government. Should not the yardstick be—does this advocated doctrine protect that which our heritage sought to give us in order to make men's lives free and equal? At no time in our country's history have there been so many ideologies preached and presented, at no time have so many of these doctrines come so close to destroying this firm foundation on which this nation has prospered, and saved the world twice within our own memories.

"At least half of the present reading material today are the stories of those whose ideologies are bent in the direction of the left road. Those who would veer to the right, or keep near the center of the road, are called "old-fashioned, non-progressive reactionaries," and it is said of them, too often, that they are uninterested in the welfare of our people. These, we are the strong advocates of the theory that the framework of the Rights, of our Constitution, should, and must, be preserved.

"Pursue with me now for a moment the other vintage point at the cross-road. Let us assume that our national government, with the aggressive help of all those who are workers for the moral good of this country, and of the world, will fail, and this country, of those evil forces that make our security a thing of utmost importance, nothing will prevent our nation from taking its forceful position of leadership in bringing about world peace. This assumption, of course, will not be correct without the proper and most sincere interest on the part of every good American . . . we have unfolding in front of us today a new era, and with only a few of these new frontiers yet reached. Red aggression will not stop with the unfolding of a new era, a new era of opportunity, a new era of what can be a new freedom. We will see a transformation equal within the decade of now.

"We are gradually beginning to realize the error there is in certain types of business. People are beginning to appreciate the smaller and more important things, the things that are most vital in the building of homes, character and stronger moral fibre. The great masses of several years ago who sought after the seeming urban centers are today seeking the pleasures of rural life and smaller rural communities.

"We must . . . face, realistically, a future wherein we give quarters to none except those who appreciate the qualities of a government which will stand steadfast and firm against any intrusion by those seeking within, as well as those working without. And, should we comprise, even though by only a sight, it can only mean our writing the end to a thing so cherished and so successful during these past 187 years.

"In closing I could say nothing that would be as meaningful as the statement made by Thomas Jefferson at the close of his first inaugural address:

"May that infinite power which rules the destinies of the universe, lead our councils to what is best, and give them a favorable issue for your peace and prosperity."

Ky.-Tenn. Authorities Honor Fish Licenses In Wolf River Section

Due to the peculiar position of Dale Hollow Lake, with sections lying both in Kentucky and Tennessee, authorities of these two states have reached an agreement to honor licenses of fishermen from these two states in sections of Wolf River embayment of the lake, the Division of Game and Fish announced today.

Both Kentucky and Tennessee fishermen will be honored in that section of Wolf River, beginning at a line crossing Wolf River at its mouth in the vicinity of Pilot's Island and continuing to the point where Wolf River first crosses the Kentucky-Tennessee State line. Kentucky licenses will not be honored above the latter point nor will Tennessee licenses be valid in Hwill Creek, a tributary of Wolf River. No other portion of the lake, except that outlined, is affected by the agreement. In other words, the Division points out, Kentucky licenses shall be required in every other section of the lake that lies within Kentucky, and Tennessee licenses for every section lying within the boundaries of Tennessee.

The authorities also announced that both Kentucky and Tennessee licenses will be valid in that section of Kentucky Lake south of U. S. Highway 68 Bridge (on the road between Murray and Hopkinsville) and north of a bridge on Tennessee State High 76 ton the road between Paris and Clarksville, Tenn.).

According to the agreement, the Division says, creel limits and size limits established by each state will be recognized along with the license of the state.

Barren county farmers this year turned under their largest green manure crop, vetch and crimson clover making up most of it.

In Washington county, 235 farmers have 2,452 cows enrolled in the artificial insemination program.

At the Lindsey-Lawson 4-H Club flower exchange in Muhlenberg county, each member brought a shrub or bouquet.

The new poultry house built by George Menshouse of Boyd county has an endless chain feeder, dropping pits, community nests and automatic water system.

Just like no artist, regardless of styles, has been able to capture on canvas the Godlike beauty of a sunset, so it is with the sayings of children. Their own versions are utter.

But, nevertheless . . . there's a certain young married couple in town, who have an especially cute, unusually energetic offspring by the name of Wesley.

That's right—the Shearers . . . Rev. Thomas Ralph, as you know, is an undertaker and the "up hours" of one in such a profession are often varied and long.

Mommy, Ann, after cleaning up Wesley, cleaning up the house, cleaning up Ralph, shopping and cooking three meals a day, usually finds an hour or so each night to sleep.

They'll be a pretty normal setup. They don't use an alarm clock at the Shearer residence. Don't need one . . . Wesley takes care of that. Every night about 2 a. m. she gets wound-up and every morning by 6:30 she goes off. Usually before 6:30 she goes off. Little Wesley, by the way, has bed-peeps anxiously into her parents room about 5:30 a. m. Ann and Ralph, sleeping away as, regardless of the hour or day is of work . . .

Well . . . let's get up!

But, as a general rule, they love her!

Been noticing those beautiful new woodlands in the Stoney Creek section?

They were put out by our local state highway engineer, Becker Moorefield, had them made . . .

They'll be nice for returning Kentuckians, entouse home for "My Old Kentucky Home Coming" . . .

We really had a horse shows here in Carlisle, Saturday.

A whole lot of people had a whole lot of fun and a whole lot of good horses and riders, too.

As usual, the McAtleys had things pretty much their own way, winning a good deal of the Nicholas County money. They are all real showmen able to appeal to the sport. They don't like to get beaten, but they're generous and mighty hard to keep from it.

Pete complimented the show officials highly as did most every exhibitor that came.

When Eleanor Bruce, best lady rider in the state of Kentucky for the past couple of years, came over to ride in the race, she said she always liked to show at Carlisle. It was here that she won her very first ribbon years ago. Since then she's won about every possible ship and fine gaited pony class that's offered.

Paul DeLott, Cincinnati horseman, was very much impressed with the show and John D. Power's announcing.

Yep! The VFW boys really did themselves proud. A show of that fine caliber is a tremendous undertaking. We watched the finess horses in showing competition with each year's show surpassing the one before.

But, I don't see how it could get any better.

If you all know this fella Evens, you'd probably get a bigger bang out of his article on the Derby. Taking a Bath". But know him or not, he's written a humorous, if I think and hope you'll enjoy it. Here 'tis—

I don't know how it is with you, but me, I don't like to take a bath. Never did.

The Order of Bath at our house is a weekly affair. Saturday night routine in which us kids showed little interest. Along about nine o'clock Operation Scrub set in. A quilt was hung over the kitchen door, the old galvanized tub was filled with hot (often) water, a cake of Grimpda's soup was unwrapped, and instructions were issued to jump in.

Whether it was my lack of interest, or my aversion to action, up to now I never remember having been first in the tub. When I got ready the water was cold. Maybe psychiatrists will hold this as the basis of my dislike.

Another thing: Bath tubs are dangerous. Many a man has skidded out of a slick tub into an early grave. And then, when you take a bath on a cold evening you know, you might catch pneumonia! Yes, sir, bathing is a dangerous thing. All you do is gamble your life against cleanliness. And who wants to be half safe? Why not just skip the whole thing?

However, since "cleanliness is next to godliness," according to a fellow by the name of Wesley, maybe we should conform to cus-

Farmers Stock Yards Sales On Tuesday

Owners Floyd Ison and Ellis Stevens of the Carlisle Stock Yards Company, have announced their intention to resume sales on Tuesdays beginning with their opening lamb sale June 13.

The management stated that Thursday sales worked a hardship on many buyers and they feel that the Tuesday sales on Tuesday more buyers would be on the local market.

There will be special buyers on the opening lamb sale.

An additional highlight of the July 4 Homecoming celebration was announced yesterday with the announcement that the long awaited dedication of the beautiful, swaied dedication of the beautiful, new Nicholas County hospital has been set for Sunday, July 2, at 2:00 p. m.

Many notables, both State and Federal, are expected to be on hand to participate in the dedicatory services. Invitations have been extended to Gov. Earle C. Clements, members of hospital boards, leading physicians and county officials.

A large crowd is expected for the dedication, at which time all persons, especially former Nicholas countians home that week who will be glad to note the progress of the present day Nicholas county, will be given the opportunity to make financial contributions.

The Carlisle Methodist church choirs will combine their voices to make certain financial contributions and has assured the flower committee, Mrs. Naomi Cook and Mrs. Ben Buckner, that flower bed arrangements will be taken care of by the choirs.

The flowers are to be transplanted on the next few days in order that they may be in full bloom on July 2.

There are also rooms available for those who may wish to stay in town overnight. Persons so desiring are asked to contact members of the board.

Furniture and equipment are arriving daily. It is being un-

Show Crowd Of 2,500 Persons See Master Genius Win 5-Gaited Stake

An enthusiastic crowd of approximately 2,500 persons saw the stables of DeAtley and Biederstaens, North Middletown, Pete DeAtley up, walk off with first money in each the three and five gaited rings here Tuesday night in the opening show on the Central Kentucky Horse Show Association Circuit, sponsored by Lexington Post No. 8666, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Probably the largest crowd ever to attend a sporting event in Nicholas county saw Pete DeAtley ride Master Genius to a thrilling win over Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Gould's Kentucky Squire in the five gaited class of the Carlisle show, described by judges as one of the best hoss shows in Kentucky.

DeAtley also rode Hallelujah Night to win over Special Agent, entry of DeAtley and Combs, North Middletown in the $190 three gaited stake.

A new addition to this year's show, the walking stallion class, was copped by a DeAtley, as Art DeAtley, young Eddy Scherff's pet, in the roadster ring.

Much to the delight of the crowd, Scherffville's Pride, driven by Joe and Tinnie Scherff, Cynthiana, won the pleasure pair class.

Rings Full

Judge J Rankin Paul, Washington Court House, Ohio, it was a tough assignment all night long. Most of the 10 rings were filled to capacity by top contenders from Kentucky and the states to the west.

Seventeen entries were counted in both the walking horse and gaited classes. Thirteen entries horses vied for honors in the five gaited competition

Craigs, Nicholas County Nine Win; Games Scheduled Thursday, Friday

No thanks to the weatherman, the Sportsman's Softball league opened its season in Carlisle Friday before a small crowd who braved threatening weather conditions to see Craigs Service Station nine defeat Nicholas County nine in initial wins.

In the opener, Craigs, led by P. I. Tumey, veteran moundsman, scored in the first inning and in the first inning to go on to an abbreviated five inning 13-6 win over the Carlisle Merchants.

The Merchants came back strong to take the lead from the Blue Licks nine with a pair of runs in the third and fourth frames. However, a nine run outburst in the fourth inning was more than enough to win the Merchants. Eugene Cruikenbeard lost the decision.

In the nightcaps Nicholas County high, vanned by V. Fryman, topped Watkins Grocery and Feed, 8-1. After a scoreless first inning, the County lads pushed across a marker in the bottom of the second and on the fourth netted the game with three more tallies in the fourth.

The specific amount of the raise for each teacher could not be determined at this time, but Supt. Davis stated it should be approximately $10 per month for those who attended summer school.

State Tax Measure To Save $15,000

The Kentucky Department of Revenue has under consideration, as an economy measure, plans to discontinue mailing of individual income tax forms, Herber John-son, Director of the Income Tax Division announced in Frankfort.

Only about 18 per cent of the forms mailed to individuals are actually returned. Apparently when the taxpayer is ready to make out his return he has already found it convenient to use a blank furnish-ed by his employer, insurance companies, and at industrial and business forms for self employed persons. Individual forms will also continue to be mailed on request.

A survey of the Department's operation shows that discontinuing of the mailing of individual forms would save in excess of $15,000 per year in this division.

Johnson pointed out that while the responsibility for obtaining forms and making a return is on the taxpayer it is the policy of the Department to assist him in every possible way. However, he believed that the contemplated change would save money without working a hardship on the taxpayer.

The forms for next year are also being simplified and will be more in line with the Federal form, Johnson added.

FFA Corn Contest Entered By Nine

The highest yield per acre in the Carlisle Future Farmers of American corn raising contest will be awarded a $50 U. S. Savings bond given by the First National Bank, according to agricultural advisor G. B. Leonard.

This contest is one of eight sponsored by local firms and was organized three years ago.

The highest yield has been over 100 bushels to the acre. It will be necessary for the entries to have their ground measured by a recognized surveyor.

Joe Blount, Charles Carter, Jimmie Cooper, Douglas Clary Billy Davis, David Hardin, Gilbert Logan, Kenneth Lyman and Billy Story have entered the contest.

Many improved practices will have to be used in order to win, such as adapted hybrid seed, large quantities of fertilizer, use of a sweet clover seed killer and a heavy planting of 14,000 stalks per acre. Even a national crop is needed on all farms for livestock and the contest is designed to allow these youths to try their ability, Mr. Leonard said.

County Attorney Charles Cox announced Wednesday that nearly all right-of-way had been obtained along the Upper Jackstown road and that there was reason to believe the rest would be gotten early next week. Construction will start in the near future.
