Here Abouts---

For a long, long time I've waited for that word, for even a verbal tribute to "Mother". The time is here, but, words aren't forthcoming. Perhaps it's because actions, and not words, can better speak what is felt down deep inside for 'that person' who loves you for what you are instead of what you could or should be.

While loafing through a book 'Best Loved Poems', I ran across a poem. It reminded me of what I overheard a man say on a crowded bus, back during the war years, when an elderly lady boarded the bus only to find all the seats occupied.

This gentleman arose and said to the aged passenger:

"Here lady, take this seat. I'd expect someone to do the same for my mother."

Somebody's Mother

The woman was old and ragged and gray
And bent with the chill of the winter's day.
The street was wet with a recent snow
And the woman's feet were aged and slow.

She stood at the crossing and waited long,
Alone, uncared for, amid the throng

Of human beings who passed her
Or heed the glance of her anxious eye.

Down the street, with laughter and shout,
Glad in the freedom of "school let out",
Came the boys like a flock of sheep,
Hailing the snow piled white and deep.

Past the old woman so old and gray
Hastened the children on their way.
Nor offered a helping hand to her—
So meek, so timid, afraid to stir
Lest the carriage wheels or the horses feet
Should crowd her down in the slippery street.

At last came one of the merry troop,
The gayest laddie of all the group;
He paused beside her and whispered low,
"I'll help you cross, if you wish to go."

Her aged hand on his strong young arm
She placed, and so, without hurt or harm,
He guided the trembling feet along,
Proud that his own were firm and strong.

Then back again to his friends he went,
His young heart happy and well contented.

She's somebody's mother, boys, you know,
For she's all aged and poor and slow.

And I hope some fellow will lend a hand
To help my mother, you understand.
If ever she's poor and old and gray,
When her own dear boy is far away.

And "somebody's mother" bowed low her head

In her home that night, and the prayer she said
Was, "God be kind to the noble boy,
Who is somebody's son, and pride and joy."

Because we were the first county in the nation to elected our quota during the last Savings Bond drive, (we weren't even close this year) Carlisle and Nicholas county have been designated as one of the very few shops in Kentucky for the purpose of displaying either an exact replica of the Liberty Bell that hangs in Philadelphia, the "City of Brotherly Love".

The Bell is currently on tour of the nation and will be in Carlisle Thursday afternoon, June 1.

Reg Womack, our county Bond chairman, who right now, along with the other hospital board members, is neck-up in the process of selecting hospital personnel, wants all children, especially, to see this heralded symbol of freedom.

A book nearly 100 years old was brought to the city office by Elmer Ritchie last week.

Entitled Mitchell's School Geography", the book had been mysplaced and only recently found by Mrs R., while cleaning an old clock, formerly the property of Chappell Ritchie. Upon his death, "Aunt Sally" Ritchie requested that Elmer have the book.

Anyway, the geography once belonged to Elmer's great uncle, Franklin Mantin Hollar, when he attended Mt. Pleasant school, back when the U. S. boasted of 31 states, six counties and one federal district. Millard Fillmore, 13th president, was in charge of running the show.

Kentucky, according to the little brown book, was bordered on for her Indian corn, wheat, oats, hemp and tobacco. Hydrogen was last on the list.

Look what 100 years have done.

Now they've got a mashed potatoe powder you add water to and you can't mangle the real thing into an edible dish.

Likewise, we spied the latest-out-from-friction world, an electric typewriter was tried out Tuesday afternoon in the County Clerk's office.

Just about the time everybody gathered round to see the machine, some little genius went home and wire to delay the demonstration.

That unanswerable gave Jess Sapp an opportunity to add his clever two-cents worth.

"You know," he said, "things always backfire on you when you especially want to show them off.

"Take, for instance, Wilhelmina. I no sooner than brag on her real big til I look down and see a piece of uh . . . uh . . . something underneath it took him a good minute to think of the right word to start extending below her dress.

Head-On Collision Causes Serious Injury

A head-on collision on Highway 68 near Forest Retreat Wednesday at 9:00 a. m., involving a GMC stake-truck and a Chevy 4-door coupe towing a 1919 Buick, resulted in the serious injury of Gordon Hobson, Holly, Michigan, driver of the truck.

Hobson was removed from the local hospital to Lexington Sanitarium.

R. C. Fleming, Columbus, Ohio, driver of the car said that a cloud of dust evidently impaired the vision of the truck driver who had swerved to avoid hitting a farm tractor alongside the road when the crash occurred.

Health Officer Urges Rabies Prevention

Control and prevention of rabies is a community problem and one which requires full community cooperation. There have been a great many false theories about the cause and cure of rabies as, for example, the use of the mad stone and the idea that most dogs went mad during "dog days" in July and August.

Actually, statistics show that animals catch rabies and bite people during all seasons of the year, but the peak is higher in the early spring and fall. The most important point to remember, however, is that rabies may be prevented.
