Liberty Bell Replica Next Thursday P. M.

When the original Liberty Bell was cast in England some two hundred years ago, a long and dramatic adventure began, climaxed in 1776, when the Liberty Bell sounded America's freedom.

Today, the Sesquicentennial Savings Bonds Drive, sponsored by the Treasury Department is conducting a national stimulation bond drive to increase public participation in the bond program and awareness of the opportunity Savings Bonds afford a better future.

When Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder, announced that the Independence Bond Drive would be symbolized by the Liberty Bell, six of America's copper producers volunteered to have fifty-two exact replicas of the Liberty Bell made to highlight the drive—May 15 through July 4.

Next week one of these replicas will arrive in Carlisle to spotlight sales activities and rallies. This Liberty Bell will be given to Kentucky at the conclusion of the Drive on July 4, and the Bell that we will hear and see during its appearance, is exactly like the original Liberty Bell, even to its tone.

Billmakers throughout the country have examined the duplicates and avgue that because of this exact similarity of structure to the original bell so the same sound that is heard in Philadelphia in 1776.
