A Letter to the Editor

Washington, D. C.
August 21, 1951

Mrs. S. W. Keller
Carlisle, Kentucky
Dear Edna,

The good old Mercury greets me on Monday morning, and it truly brings back my childhood days and old friends, many times I find the passing of some one I grew up with, but it seems to me that you and I have found the Fountain of Youth.

Our good "Veep" just made a remark yesterday that to me seems logical. "A man who is seventy years young is only as old as a man was when he was fifty, some forty years ago."

I am a receptionist with the Democratic National Committee and my life is so full and interesting, I do not have time to count birthdays.

As you may know that Tom with her great heart asked Senator Stanley Blake (1948) to request Senator Barkley, "Veep," to place me here, and three years have gone and I am still going strong and very happy; met so many Kentuckians here and also at our Kentucky Society which meets once a month all through the winter.

I have a large table for the season and am always glad to entertain folks from home. Roy Smart has a table next to me and we "gab" about Kentucky. Two years ago Annie K Pott's daughter and her husband sat at the table with me (by chance), we had fun as it was Derby Day party. Annie Norvell Smith is another one who goes on her merry way, as I do and is fine. I was so sorry to read of Ida Tilton's death.

Tell Carlisle folks that any time they are in Washington I will be glad to see them, I am at the Committee each day from nine to five. Much love to you and the old timers who remember me.

As ever,
Mrs. C. C. Adams
1835 K. St. N. W.

IT MEANS SO MUCH TO KEEP IN TOUCH
"Hello, Dad—it's a Boy! we're naming him for you!"
The true value of your telephone is the value of voices you love, brought right into your home. It's the value of steps saved, errands run, questions answered, peace of mind restored. All told, it's an amazing day's work for a modest day's pay. The price of your telephone service is still remarkably low as compared with the prices of most other things you buy. And telephone folks are busy all the time expanding and improving the service further—making it still more useful and valuable for everyone.

MORE MILK FROM PASTURE
Southern States MILKMAKERS
Even though milk production is always good at this time of the year, it can easily be improved by feeding Southern States 16% or 20% Milkmaker along with your pasture. Just a few pounds of either of these high TDN (Total Digestible Nutrients) feeds is enough to produce a profitable jump in milk production. Try them. Dairymen agree they really do a job!

A SHORT STORY BY JANE W. CLAUSEN
THE RIB BONE

IT WAS a complete blow to Agnes' husband and mother-in-law when she told them the news.

Up to that point the evening had been uneventful and commonplace. Agnes had arrived home just before dinner and dinner had been on time. Mum had everything ready as always and the three of them had eaten with the usual amount of talk.

Mum had complained of her feet and declared she must go to the chiropodist. Peter said she should make an appointment the next day. "Well," said Mum, "what with food so high, I thought I'd wait until you were working again."

"Now, don't you worry about that. I've a first class job all lined up."

Mum had beamed and Agnes had smiled, just a regular genuine wifely smile with no twist of the thought of Peter's months of unemployment.

Surely that had been the time for her to speak up, but she waited until after the last dish was dried and she and Mum joined Peter in the living room.

"I might as well tell you now," she said, sitting in the shadows, and Mum's face clouded instantly and Peter grew serious. "I'm out of work."

"Oh, I . . ." guess the mournful monosyllable from Mum.

Peter said nothing for a moment.

"That old hen has had it in for me for a long time and all it took was one more complaint from Mrs. Dobson. She comes in the beauty parlor looking like trouble."

"Don't worry about it, lover," said Peter. "Like I said, I've got this new job all lined up. It's a good one, too."

They listened a while to Peter extolling the virtue of the wonderful job and then settled down to a three handed game of canasta.

The next morning Peter set out early and Agnes remained at home with Mum.

They sat in silence over their second cup of coffee and then the unusualness of the moment spurred Mum's tongue.

"I don't know, Agnes, but it's just as well. This is the way it should be, the wife at home, the husband out for work."

"Peter's not gone to work."

"No, but it's the first time he's left this early even to look for work for months. I don't know where he gets his lazy streak. His father was a hustler and I'm not afraid of work even yet."

Agnes laughed.

"I know, Mum, but don't be too hard on him. Peter's Peter!"

"He is that!" vowed Mum. "A fine handsome man he is, but you'll admit he's been comfortable living on what you could make, along with my small pension."

"That's why I got fired!"

Mum looked at her daughter-in-law with a new respect in her eye.

"I figured just what you've been figuring and I decided I really owed it to Peter to lose my job. So I did!"

Mum's gray head went back and she laughed until the tears rolled down her face.

They spent a long, easy day. Agnes had a leisurely bath and then used some of her training on herself and she was both beautiful and rested when Peter came home.

He breezed in happily.

Mum reached him first and he planted a kiss on her cheek before he grabbed Agnes in his arms and swung her off the floor.

"I didn't want you gals to know," he said, "but I was a bit worried last night. The way bills pour in and all with nothing in the bank."

He set Agnes down on the floor and looked up at his wife.

"So . . . ," she said.

"So I went out and found a job. One that'll bring in the checkola pronto."

"Oh, Peter!" She hugged him soundly.

"Ehh, me!" echoed his mother.

"What is it? When do you start?" asked Agnes.

"Ehh, oo," said Peter merrily. "Don't jump to conclusions. It's a fine new beauty salon. And you start Monday. I've got to keep mum said free for that wonderful job."
