"What My Community Needs"

The Kentucky Chamber of Commerce met to discuss the needs of the state again on their endeavor to make Kentucky a better place in which to live.

By organizing a better county, "What My Community Needs," the Kentucky Chamber is striving to make high school students aware of the needs of their respective communities in order to stimulate good citizenship and progressive thinking among the youth of Kentucky. It will give the children of Carlisle and other communities a chance to point out community defects by their elders.

At the same time, it might be well worth while for the elder folk of this community to study the needs of their own communities. Carlisle and Nicholas county are more attractive places to live than many other communities in the state and older residents participating in this study to help them to see their own communities in a different light elsewhere. This fact makes you wonder why other communities do not provide enough opportunity to help their young citizens do this.

The Carlisle Rotary club, which is sponsoring the event, would not be complicated if the members of the community were interested in the progress of their community.

Farm Bureau Protects Farmers

Last year farmers in Kentucky received $12,000,000 in farm products. This income plus interest, dividends, rents, etc., makes the Kentucky farmer a 70 per cent aristocrat.

At the same time, with 1,460 farms of 72 acres apiece, the cash farm market value was over $3,500,000,000.
