Spegal Honored In Speech Contest

gle for daily bread? The power, wealth, vigor of our people, and the abundance of our nation is largely due to the marvelous productivity of our soil.

"Future generations have every right to expect abundant, healthy-giving products from well maintained soil just as we do today. Conservation farming will preserve this heritage.

"We future farmers pledge our support to conservation farming which secures high yields and still maintains the fertility of our land. We want city and town people to realize that the influence of the soil doesn't stop at their city limits. Conservation farming has a dollar and cents value to city people as well as farmers. When the care of the land fails to return profits to farmers, they can't buy goods sold by city workers. The welfare of the factory worker, the banker, the store keeper, in fact all of our people are dependent upon the welfare of the farmer. Greater prosperity and higher standards of living will certainly result when all farmers realize the importance of conservation farming and practice it on every farm.

"We future farmers believe in less dependance in bargaining; in the life abundant and enough honest wealth to make it so for others as well as ourselves; in less need for charity and more of it when needed. In being happy and playing square with those whose happiness depends upon us.

"How can we play square with those whose happiness depends upon us unless we preserve this heritage of good soil. Great was the task of the pioneers of America, forefathers of those who farm the land today, to fell the trees so that they might cultivate the land and survive. They labored to leave a greater opportunity to their children and they were successful at the lands expense.

"Farmers today who would pass a greater heritage on to their children face a different problem it is the problem of...building up what they have and conserving it rather than clearing new land. Our population is increasing but we have no new frontiers to exploit. So long as the land continues to wash away the opportunity created by the pioneers is lost with it.

"We future farmers cherish this heritage which has been passed on from our forefathers. We pledge our support to the conservation of the land. We feel that in protecting it we are protecting our country. For preserving the land is like flying 'Old Glory' full mast. As the flag is our emblem of defense against harm from beyond our borders, conservation farming is the pattern for protection against forces, also destructive, within our own land.

"The way lies clear before us. May we devote our knowledge and skill to conservation of the soil, that we may live a more abundant life, enrich our nation, strengthen freedom and create new hope for all humanity. 'Conservation farming for abundance today and greater prosperity in the future.'"

Defense Counsel John P. Lair, Cynthiana, filed a writ of habeas corpus with Circuit Judge A. M. Barker, Wednesday afternoon. Lair's action came following the examining trial held Monday afternoon for Storey, who is accused of the murder of Bruce Crawford last Tuesday night.

Circuit Judge Barker granted the motion and set bail for the defendant at $5,000.

George Sosby and William Stone were named as sureties for the $5,000 bail and Storey was released to their custody.

Testimony at the examining trial held Monday afternoon is given in the following paragraphs:

The prosecution called only four witnesses.

Sheriff John Clinkenbeard was the first to testify and told under what conditions the body was found, the apparent scene of the murder, the trail that the body had made where it had been dragged, and the arrest and subsequent confession of Storey.

Storey confessed early Thursday morning to Commonwealth Attorney Eugene Cox and Sheriff Clinkenbeard and told them that he had heard an intruder in his house. Becoming alarmed, he added, he picked up the shotgun and as the intruder started up the steps, he shot and killed him. Storey said that he didn't know who he had shot until after he fired the gun.

Enters "Not Guilty" Plea

Storey did not testify at the hearing but pleaded "not guilty".

The second witness was Deputy Sheriff Milton Fryman, who corroborated Sheriff Clinkenbeard's statements. Attorney Charles Cox was the third witness and Acting Coroner Marion Mathers was the final witness and stated that the cause of death was a single shot to the victim's neck.

County Judge Spencer Taylor, after hearing testimony for the prosecution, said that it was the "digression of the court to hold Robert Storey without bail to await the action of the May session of the Nicholas grand jury."

Lair Protests

Lair protested his decision and told the court that the prosecution had introduced no testimony at the examining trial to warrant the holding of Storey without bail.

Judge Taylor referred to the mental condition of the defendant after Lair's protest, but Lair said that "no testimony as to his mental condition" was mentioned at the hearing. Lair stated that Storey's sister had agreed to keep him, if released on bail, and asked the court to fix a reasonable amount of bail, which Lair said could be raised.

Date Changed

When Judge Taylor reaffirmed his earlier decision, Lair said that he would file the writ of habeas corpus with Circuit Judge Barker, and both prosecution and defense agreed on Friday afternoon in the local court house as the date and setting for the hearing. The date was later changed by agreement of both prosecution and defense to Wednesday afternoon.
