The pond will cover one and one-half acres and is 16 to 17 feet deep. It has a 20 foot dam and is fed by a large spring.—The Carlisle Mercury photo.

The challenge to a life of service in the Christian ministry in the foreign mission field will be presented by Rev. H. C. Hobgood at ordination services for his son, Rev. C. Hobgood, at services to be held Wednesday, April 30, at the Moorefield Christian church.

The young Mr. Hobgood was born at a mission station in Belgian Congo where his parents for many years have worked with a Disciples of Christ mission. In 1945 he and his family returned to the Congo to take up the work of his parents. He will serve as an evangelist missionary, and Mrs. Hobgood (the former Betty Bowen of Lexington and Chicago) will work in the area of elementary education in the mission schools.

Father On Program

Rev. Hobgood will make the charge to the candidate in his son's ordination. The sermon is to be preached by Dwight E. Stevenson, professor of Homiletics at the College of the Bible and adviser for Mr. Hobgood during his seminary study.

Rev. John Chenault of Mt. Sterling will make the charge to the congregation. Rev. T. H. Alderson of Danville is to give the invocation and benediction. Rev. J. J. Whitehouse, of Carlisle, will read the scripture.

The candidate will be presented for ordination by Robert Blount, elder of the Moorefield church. Other Moorefield elders participating in the service will be Homer Cook, Charles Irvin, Hanson Judge, Minor Judge, H. C. Heilman and Ben Horne.

Pastor Four Years

Mr. Hobgood has been pastor of the Moorefield church for the past four years, during which time the church has made great strides. Preaching services, previously held on two Sundays each month, are held each week. Membership has climbed steadily, and giving to benevolences has been increased from a dollar per member to eight dollars per member.

Mr. Hobgood has been living in Lexington since coming to the United States for his education. He was graduated from Transylvania College, and he now is a student at the College of the Bible. He expects to receive his Bachelor of Divinity from the seminary in Lexington in June, 1953.

After further training in mission work he will return to the Belgian Congo. A younger sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Randal Martin of Lexington, expect to become missionaries to the Congo also.

Mr. and Mrs. Hobgood are the parents of a nine-months-old daughter, Ann.

The ordination services are set for 7:30 p. m.

Local Fishermen Bring Home String

Wolf Creek Dam and Center Hill, Tennessee, as well as local streams were the scene of numerous fishing activities by local fishermen last week.

Reports on the number of fish caught indicate that fishing is extremely good with a reported caught of 120 and 130 bass, but only 44 of them were large enough to keep. No fish of outstanding size were reported caught.

Marion and Taylor Mathers, Bill Smith, and Everett Wilson left Wednesday for Burnside, near Wolf Creek, and caught 23 bass there the first day. The water began muddying on them and they transferred their efforts to Center Hill, Tennessee, where they added 38 more to their string during the next few days.

Reports from around here on fishing in local streams Sunday were that no fish at all were biting.

The county clerk's office reported this week that 64 county fishing licenses had been sold and 449 state-wide licenses had been sold.

Nicholas Seniors See Many Interesting Sights During Two Day Tour Around Nation's Capitol

By Margaret Crouch

The senior class of the Nicholas County high school took its annual trip last week.

The class left the school Wednesday morning and were taken by bus to the Lexington train station, where the train for Washington, D. C., our destination, left at 4:40 p. m.

There was not much sleeping done that night for not many of us had ever ridden on a train. After breakfast in the dining car we arrived in Washington around nine o'clock.

In a few minutes we were on the sight-seeing bus ready to begin our tour of the city. Our tour of the city. OythleNSly first stop was the Bureau of Printing and Engraving where all of the paper money in the U. S. is made. Here we saw the various processes that money has to go through before it can be distributed to the public.

The next stop on our tour was the Pan-American building. This building is owned by the 21 countries of North and South America and used for the meetings of these countries. It was completed in 1910 while William Howard Taft was president. It cost $1,-100,000 or which Andrew Carnegie donated over half. The rest of the cost was divided among the other nations.

Capitol Impressive

The Capitol Building was our next stop where we were impressed by the beautiful pictures on the walls and in the dome. Our guide then took us to the House of Representatives, the largest meeting house in the world. We then toured the Senate chambers.

On our way again through the streets of Washington, we passed the government greenhouses and the driver of our bus told us that freshly cut flowers were sent to all the government buildings and the ones that were left were sent to the Veterans hospitals throughout the city.

Stop At Smithsonian

We then stopped at the Smithsonian Institute where we visited Aeronautical building of the institute and saw the "Kitty Hawk," "Spirit of St. Louis," and many other interesting airplanes.

From Washington we motored to nearby Alexandria, Virginia, where we had lunch in the "Old Cluft Tea House".

Our tour of Alexandria took us down the only Washington street in the United States that is not named for George Washington. It was named for his father in compliance with a request of his.

Later we saw the house in which the Revolutionary War was declared and the preamble to our Constitution was signed. We also saw the oldest newspaper in the U. S., and the only one that published the notice of Washington's death.

See Washington's Home

We then traveled to Washington's home at Mt. Vernon and saw the room in which Washington died.

Our next stop was Arlington National Cemetery where we wit-

Publishers Auxiliary Names Sageser Kash 'Editor Of The Week'

The Publishers' Auxiliary, regarded by most newspapermen as the newspaperman's newspaper, this past week named Sag Kash, editor of the Cynthiana Democrat as its "Editor of the Week."

The Auxiliary runs this feature on the outstanding editors of the country and selected Mr. Kash for his many and diversified talents in the newspaper field.

Mr. Kash is a former editor of The Carlisle Mercury, and is the son of Mrs. Clarence Kash of Carlisle. He attended Carlisle high school, graduating in 1930 and graduated from the University of Kentucky in 1936. He was born in Moorefield in 1910.

Consistent Prize Winner

Besides being a consistent prize winner in the Kentucky Press Association's annual "Better Newspaper" contests, Mr. Kash has also innovated several practices in the newspapering profession.

His most notable perhaps was the formation of an editorial advisory board consisting of three men, active in community affairs, who advise him on the needs of his community and assist him in the selection of topics for his editorials. In this way, Mr. Kash has been able to cover approximately every available community topic of interest to his readers.

Mr. Kash joined the Cynthiana Democrat as editor on August 1, 1949, leaving the editorship of The Mercury to accept that position.

Editor Kash is also a stockholder in the Cynthiana Publishing Company.

Writer Of Cold Checks Arrested In Henryville

An arrest that will perhaps bring an end to a series of cold checks being cashed in Carlisle was reported Tuesday afternoon by Police Chief Buck Wasson and Patrolman W. T. Bealert.

Answering a complaint from a Sharpsburg store owner, that he had been fleeced out of $85 by a cold check artist from this city, the officers took the man to Henryville where he identified T. B. Marshall, 27, as being the passer of the cold checks.

Find Evidence

Officers Wasson and Bealert arrested Marshall and charged him with the passing of cold checks and denied the charge until State Trooper C. Harp searched Marshall's car and found new shoes and new overalls, which the Sharpsburg store owner identified as the ones he had sold the man.

Immediately after the arrest the officers took Marshall to Sharpsburg where the store owner's daughter, who had waited on Marshall, identified him as the cold check artist.

Other Cold Checks

Other cold checks began coming to light in local stores and an investigation revealed that a $45 bad check had been cashed at the Square Deal Grocery, a $35 bad check at the Nicholas Locker plant, a $55 cold check at Southern States Carlisle Cooperative, a $40 cold check at Campbell's Grocery and a $25 cold check at Mrs. Conoly's grocery at Frogtown.

Marshall refused to admit he cashed the cold checks in Nicholas county, but did admit to cashing the one in Sharpsburg, which was passed at Rogers Store. Warrants were signed with various signatures including "Ball, Thompson, Simpson," and other names.

Local officers said the handwriting on the various checks in question were almost identical.

Marshall was held in the Nicholas county jail pending preliminary hearing in Bath and Nicholas county courts.

He was charged with forgery.
