State Income Taxes Show Increase Here

A local of 69 more individuals paid Kentucky state income taxes for 1951 than paid them for 1950 in Nicholas county, according to Commissioner of Revenue H. Clyde Reeves.

The total number of those filing in 1951 from this county was 318. This meant that only 42.2 persons per 1000 population filed returns.

However, this figure represented an increase, as only 33.1 per thousand population filed returns in 1950 from Nicholas.

The average payment for each return in Kentucky was $47.17.

The Golden Text is from I John 14 6, 13: "My city of God . . . Hereby know we that we dwell in him, and he in us, because he hath given us of his Spirit."

Soil Samples Best Taken In Fall Or Late Summer Says County Agent

"Soil samples for testing can be more effectively taken in the late summer and fall," W. T. Straw, county agent, announced this week.

There are many advantages for fall testing since the soil is in a more loose condition and moisture is not excessive. Early testing enables the farmer to determine his soil needs and order fertilizers early.

Now is the time to make soil tests on fields that are to be seeded to fall grasses or legumes in the spring.

For the past two years there have been shortages of many kinds of fertilizer. The man that has his test made early is in the best position to select the analysis of fertilizer best suited to his land.

As far as testing land in connection with tobacco production we have found after four years experience in testing tobacco land that tobacco fields should be tested each year. This is a complete change in recommendations.

The reason for the change is the fact that potash, a very important element in producing high quality tobacco is quite soluble in water. The quantity of potash available varies to a large degree from year to year. Soil should be tested each year for tobacco because of this potash condition.

We have a better than average soil in most parts of Nicholas county However, for high quality and high yield of crops most soils will require that lime and fertilizer be added. Only a soil test will determine what elements are most needed.

Woman Fined $100 In Court Tuesday

Mrs. Quiller Kelly of Spring street was fined $100 and costs in city court Tuesday afternoon on a charge of "unlawful possession of alcoholic beverages." Police Judge Hersly Myers imposed the fine after hearing the evidence in the trial.

Mrs. Kelley's husband and "Wig" Bow were freed of similar charges at the hearing Tuesday. The trio was arrested Monday afternoon by Police Chief Buck Wasson, Sheriff John Frankenstein and Deputy Sheriff Milton Fryman.

Believing that alcoholic beverages were on the premises the local officers obtained a search warrant from Judge Myers Monday and conducted a raid that afternoon.

It was reported that Mr. Kelley was in bed at the time of the raid. Thirty-eight cans and bottles of beer, two half gallons of gin, a half pint of whiskey and about a pint of wine were confiscated from the residence at the time of the raid by the arresting officers.

The beverages were confiscated before they could be destroyed.

Sheep Thefts Blamed On Former Local Man

Eugene Gaunce, 35, Lexington, formerly of Nicholas county, was arrested last week on a charge of grand larceny in connection with sheep thefts from flocks of local and Kentucky farmers. The thefts had been going on for a month.

He pleaded guilty to the charge in Bourbon county Friday and was held to action of the grand jury. His bond was set at $2,000.

Gaunce's methods, according to the arresting officers, was to steal only a few sheep from each flock so the owner would not notice the theft for several days. So as not to become a regular customer at any of the Central Kentucky stockyards he sold the stolen sheep at different yards throughout this area.

The arrest came after a report was received by officers that Gaunce had sold some sheep at a Lexington yard and that the brand which Gaunce was alleged to the one used by a Bourbon county farmer. The license was called and identified the brand and the officers then arrested Gaunce.

Gaunce, while a resident of this county, lived on the Maysville-Lexington road.

Falmouth Dam Rumblings Begin With Bates Defeat

(Editors NoNte—The following article appeared in The Maysville Independent, Wednesday, August 6.)

Washington, August 5—Advocates of river improvement have been hopeful that Kentucky's primary election last Saturday would result in the return of a huge flood control, electric power and recreation project on the doorstep of Greater Cincinnati.

The project is known as Falmouth Dam. It would be situated some 32 miles up the Licking River from Cincinnati. The Licking flows into the Ohio between Covington and Newport.

Besides flood control, power and a great new inland lake for boating, swimming and fishing, development of the Licking would offer pollution abatement to the Ohio River and might offer a needed source of municipal water supply to Northern Kentucky cities, according to its friends.

Pollution abatement would be accomplished by systematic release of impounded water during times of low flow in the Ohio. It might prove of new importance if the Army engineers proceeded to replace Fernbank Dam, Cincinnati, and three upstream dams with a new high-level dam at Markland, Ind., making the Cincinnati harbor part of an 80-mile pool. Depth of water in the Cincinnati pool would be increased and turbulence in flow reduced with the high dam.

Opposed as Unneeded

In the primary election Rep. Brent Spence, chairman of the powerful House Banking and Currency committee, was renominated over Rep. Joe R. Bates, Greenup. Both are Democrats. Both had been elected into the same congressional district when Kentucky's congressmen were reduced from nine to eight. The defeat removes the Bates from Congress with the expiration of his term in January.

Mr. Spence has favored the dam. His district included Covington and Newport which sought the added flood protection.

Mr. Bates opposed it. His old district straddled the upper valley of the Licking whose farmers fought against being flooded by the pool.

Mr. Bates was a member of the House Appropriations Committee. Year after year that committee refused funds even for planning Falmouth.

The result has been that, although Congress approved the dam as part of the Ohio Basin's comprehensive flood control plan in June 1938, the first spade has yet to be turned.

Asked today at Newport if he intended to press for the dam, Mr. Spence was in no hurry to alienate his new constituents up the Licking, but said: "When I start out one way, I don't change."

Engineers Are Cautious

Army Engineers here were even more cautious. A press representative, when reminded that the engineers have regularly asked planning funds for the project, seemed to think they would try again this year. However, when he went to get a statement to this effect from top brass, he came back with the answers: "Oh no, you don't get us into a hot one like that."

Falmouth Dam actually is but a part of the proposed project. Congress has authorized its construction and the construction of Cave Run Reservoir, farther upstream, for flood-control purposes only. Congress could start this work simply by voting the money.

If power also is to be produced the engineers propose to increase the levels of these two dams and to add two smaller reservoirs known as Boston Station and Poosey Creek Reservoirs. New authorizing legislation would be necessary for this. All these projects, according to estimates now more than a year old would cost nearly $52 million.

The power feature has drawn particular opposition, apparently encouraged by utility corporations.

Large Underwater Animal Appears In City Reservoir Seine Last Week

Local observers of the seining operations held last week at the city reservoir were horrified on Tuesday afternoon to see what appeared to be a giant sea monster arise from the lake in the midst of the seining and almost grab two members of the State Division of Fish and Wildlife's seining crew.

The incident occurred around 4 p. m. Tuesday (as the accompanying picture will attest) and luckily The Mercury photographer was on hand to photograph the phenomon for posterity.

Described by experts of sea life as a giant Cretaceous or Cambarus affinis of the variety usually found only in salt water, no explanation has yet been forthcoming from them on how long the monster has been in the local reservoir or how it got there in the first place.

When the incident happened the seining crew were almost midway out in the lower lake about half finished with the "sweep." Observers on the bank thought that the seine had been fouled when the monster arose, but although almost directly behind the boat, only for a few seconds, when the crustaceous appeared they were both amazed and astounded.

Dinosaur Hero

Fortunately, the man who had charge of the oars in the boat kept his presence of mind and leaned on them "all his worth." Only his coed head saved the two from disaster. In the excitement that followed The Mercury reporter was unable to get his name but regrets that fact that his identity is not recorded with his heroic deed.

The giant crustaceous made one swipe at the boat with his pincers and missed it by only a few feet. It then submerged and didn't appear any more.

Needless to say, seining operations were suspended indefinitely. Experts believe the sea animal had been lying on the bottom of the lake immobile and existing by catching small fish that came his way. This opinion may account for the small number of fish that are caught at the lake each summer.

Cigarette Size

The monster appeared to be about 100 feet in length and about 40 feet in width. Evidently the seine had dragged across his back and head and caused him to become alarmed, thereby accounting for his initial appearance at the City Dock.

Fishermen Wonder

Fishing fishermen from Carlisle and the country who fish regularly in the lake we found that no one of them had ever seen the monster in their pursuit of smaller fish, and none could offer a clue to its origin.

The consensus of opinion along the bank by those who thought they saw the monster was that they were "just seeing things." This is the opinion that is shared by The Mercury staff as we have not had such monster could exist at the lake.

In fact, we're positive that this monster is not in the city reservoir because we photographed the seining operation, then photographed a crawfish, blew the picture up to several times its normal size, combined the two and made it into a newspaper picture which you see on the front page.

On well, forgive us this time will you, news gets a little dull every once in a while and we like our jokes as well as the next man.
