ROLLER TYPE DOORS FOR LEAF BARN

What is said to be one of the most modern tobacco barns in the state is being built on the farm of J. P. Bishn and Sons of Pendleton county. A three-post barn, it will be 108 feet long and 26 feet to the eaves. One-third of the siding will be doors on rollers instead of hinges to prevent wind damage. Plans from the agricultural engineering department of the University of Kentucky are being followed, said County Agent Robert H. White.

HOME-BUILT SILO AT REDUCED COST

Hobert and Edgar Epperson of Pulaski county are building a 10-by-30-foot brick silo which will hold approximately 48 to 50 tons of silage. Doing the labor in spare time on the farm, they estimate the cost will be about $350. Ready for filling this summer, it will be available for other farmers to use said Hugh Hurst, county agent with the University of Kentucky.

The Pleasant View Farm in Hopkins county has a new irrigation system in operation.

Bracken county hommakers sewed in June about 125 pairs of handmade gloves of capeskin and doeskin.

Recipe Of The Week

Despite high temperatures, protein foods must be planned for each day, says Mrs. Pearl Haak, specialist in foods at the University of Kentucky. She suggests fish fillets baked in thin cream as a light main dish.

Fish Baked In Cream

3 medium size onions
1 T butter
1 lb. fish fillets
3 T flour
1 cup light cream
½ t salt
Paprika

Lightly brown the sliced onions in butter. Place in baking dish. Roll fish fillets in flour and place on the onions. Pour cream over the fish. Sprinkle with paprika. After baking, sprinkle with salt. Bake 30 minutes in medium oven 350 degrees.

Menu: Fish baked in cream, parsley buttered potatoes, green beans, cabbage-pineapple salad, corn sticks, butter and lemon custard ice cream.

Your Garden

THE FALL GARDEN, II

By John S. Gardner, University of Kentucky

The "regular" fall garden includes the plantings of greens and turnips. The sowing date is early August through September or even to mid-October, and, to be safe, sowings may be made weekly through that range. If more than one sowing succeeds, there might be more greens than could be used, but after a fashion they might serve as a cover crop. Anyway, the jars that remain unfilled could be filled, as could also the remaining crannies in the deep freeze, to make welcome food for next winter. Fine food also would be the turnips, easily stored.

For the fall garden, rows and plots are used that have borne earlier vegetables. It should be remembered that those crops have exhausted much of the plant food that was applied to them. Inasmuch as one must be certain that there is enough plant food for making growth quick enough to beat the frost even though the rains came late, it is wise to risk some fertilizer, at 4-12-8, one pound broadcast over 80 square feet and scrashed in with a wheelhoe or a garden harrow.

The seed bed need be only 4 inches deep, but so well worked up that the soil particles are the size of the seed. These are small seeds. It should be finished with some sort of drag, to make the surface powder-fine, so that the first rain will cover the broadcast (and perhaps "brushed-in") seed.

Many sowings of mustard, turnips and the like are destroyed at their "bean-leaf" stage by the black flea-beetle. This dare not happen now, and at the first sign of sprouting, the planting should be dusted with 5 percent DDT or 5 percent Methoxychlor. Although the writer may not give this as a correct recommendation, dusting with DDT right after the seed was sown has made his fleabeetles let things alone. But early dusting suffices, and even with DDT, the risk of poisoning is no remote as to be discounted completely.

Varities are Giant Southern Curled Mustard, Seven Top turnip greens, Kale and either Purple Top Strap Leaf turnip (the "quick" one), or the "standard," Purple Top Globe. One ounce of seed sows 600 square feet.

Democrats Urged To Register Now By State Chairman

All Democrats were urged to register if necessary during the registration period from Aug. 8 to Sept. 6 by Clyde Watson, of Owensboro, who has been named pre-campaign registration chairman by Robert Humphreys, of Frankfort, chairman of the Democratic State Central Executive Committee.

Mr. Watson, who was campaign chairman for U. S. Senator Tom R. Underwood during the primary in which his opposition withdrew and who is slated to be the campaign chairman for Senator Underwood and the nominees for Congress, urged that every effort be made to register all eligible voters. Telegrams have been sent by Watson from the state headquarters in Louisville asking the county executive chairman in each county to serve as pre-campaign registration chairman.

Senator Underwood said he had traveled extensively over the state during the past week and is pleased with the favorable response to the Democratic national ticket headed by Governor Adlai Stevenson of Illinois, and Senator John J. Sparkman, of Alabama.

UK To Exhibit At State Fair

The small part of the retail food dollar that reaches the farmer's pocket will be explained in the Kentucky State Fair Exhibits of the UK College of Agriculture and Home Economics.

The college's exhibits in the interest of better farming and homemaking will be in the Grandstand building and in a near-by tent. They will be in charge of Robert H. Ford.

Tobacco plants infected with black shank will be on display. An attendant will discuss the disease and its control. Another part of the soils and crops exhibit will deal with the cost of rebuilding worn land.

The many farmers interested in irrigating tobacco, grass and other crops will see a model irrigation system in the Grandstand building. In a near-by tent will be models of a pole dairy barn, a tobacco barn and an up-to-date poultry house.

Why family gardens should include everlasting straw-berries will be a feature of the college's exhibits concerned with growing more vegetables and fruit.

Other booths in the Grandstand building will deal with home demonstration work, better farm homes, raising chickens, breeding up dairy cattle, the cow-and-calf plan of raising beef cattle, the value of good seeds, the new Kentucky fertilizer law, and activities of students studying agriculture and home economics at the University of Kentucky.

Members of 4-H clubs will have large exhibits of canned and baked foods, clothing and home furnishings.
