Food For Thought

Which costs you more—the operation of your federal government or the cost of the food you purchase in the local grocery stores for you and your families sustainence?

According to figures released this week by the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce, if the new federal budget proposal goes through both bodies of the legislature, you will be paying more to the government than you will be paying for food.

The figures released indicate that Nicholas County's share of the tax load if the new proposal becomes a law will be $1,577.00. The total amount of food purchased here in 1951 only amounted to $1,051,000. This shows that residents of this county will be paying $500,000 more for national government than food.

Don't Be An Easy Mark

We are living in an age when the fine art of trying to get something for nothing is being practiced by nations, states, cities, and on down to the lowliest pick pocket and professional writers of bad checks.

Fred Johnson, Vice President of the American Stores of Philadelphia, has compiled information on the growth of the bad check racket. For example, he points out that in the trading area of the American Stores a certain group of banks formerly turned back from three to five worthless checks a day. Now they turn back eighty each day.

After listing scores of examples of the way merchants and individuals are imposed on and bilked by the bad check artists, Mr. Johnson gives some sound advice: "Checks should never be cashed on the basis of casual acquaintance, sympathy, hard luck tales, distress telegrams, vague answers, altered credentials, haste, bluff and bluster, offended dignity, personal resentment, threats to report to the main office, or alleged friendship with an official of the company. Phoned instructions to cash checks, regardless of the source, should be disregarded."

There is one safe rule to follow. Don't cash a check for anyone whom you don't know or who cannot furnish you with absolutely satisfactory credentials.

Letters to the Editor

Elkin Place
Lancaster, Kentucky
Jan. 27, 1952

Mr. Warren R. Fisher, Jr.
Carlisle, Ky.

Dear Sir:

First I want to congratulate you on the good paper you publish. It is full of news, well gotten up and the neatest printed paper I get.

Second I want to ask a favor of you for Dr. Dan C. Elkin, of Atlanta, Georgia.

Dr. Elkin is a Lancaster boy the son of R. L. Elkin who edited the Record until his death. Now I was showing him your paper and we were talking about how neat it was when he spied the old pictures on the third page of the old thrasher with the wood fired steam engine and the ox conveyance of the engine and seperator. He asked me to write you and see if he could get the negative, or could borrow the original photo that he might have a reproduction made.

I am clipping these pictures but if I can get the film will have one made to go with some old pictures I have.

Thanking you in advance for your trouble and thanking you for the paper.

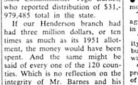
Sincerely,
I. N. Miller

REVENUE LAG REPORTED

The State Department of Revenue reported a lag in certain revenue classes—in both the general and road fund field for the first six months of the present fiscal year.

Actual collections for the period totalled $31,121,766 for the general fund as compared with a forecast of $32,743,260—while road fund collections of $29,554,361 failed to measure up to an anticipated $30,078,544.

While these sources showed an overall loss in income, selected sales and gross receipt taxes were slightly above the estimates as was the state income tax. Inheritance taxes, corporation license and property taxes were down.



The Henderson Gleaner reported the other day that the local branch of the Kentucky Department of Economic Security paid out $318,529 in assistance to the needy in 1951. The figures came from State Commissioner Vego Barnes, who reported distribution of $31,-979,485 total in the state.

If our Henderson branch had had three million dollars, or ten times as much as its 1951 allotment, the money would have been spent. And the same might be said of every one of the 120 counties. Which is no reflection on the integrity of Mr. Barnes and his 400 or more subordinates whose jobs are to hand out money to persons who qualify for assistance. The moral of this is that with the present set-up it behooves the legislature not to be too hog-tied when appropriating handout money, and every departmental executive, from Mr. Barnes down to local bureau heads to pass out taxpayers' money as if it were a sacred trust.

A few years ago public assistance was a county affair, and each justice of the peace looked after the needy in his own district. The total for Henderson county, which handed out $319,529 last year, used to be around $10,000.

You would think that in these artifically prosperous times, with more money being spent than ever before in the history of this or any other country, the number of needy would be greatly reduced instead of augmented. Mr. Barnes reports an increase of two and a half million last year over 1950. How lucky can some people get?

Nobody wants to deprive the indigent poor, homeless orphans and the blind of assistance. What we are concerned about is preventing chiseling, giving no applicant the benefit of the doubt, and inventing every case with the same hardboiled scrutiny usually practiced by private relief agencies like the Catholic charities and the Salvation Army.

Another thing, all state charities should be open to public inspection. Individuals are the best sources of information concerning dubious relief cases, and if individuals are forbidden to see local records as they are under the present law in Kentucky, they certainly will not be inclined to play detective or as a service to the state.

Opening the books will not prevent Kentucky from getting Federal aid for relief. The Federal rule against publicity was lifted for Indiana.

Labor Reported Riled
By 'One-Sided' Controls

Gifts in Bad Repute;
Free Confab Coffee Out

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON. The strict dispute was only the forerunner of what labor insiders fear is the bitterest political campaign in which it considers a one-sided controls system which it alleges makes wages the only thing actually controlled.

The biggest new strike threat on the horizon is, of course, a real walkout. John L. Lewis is getting ready to demand a new wage boost for half a million miners—the tumultuous and anthracite industries.

Waiting for a formal notice by Lewis before Feb. 1 that the present contracts will be terminated automatically on that date, a coal strike on April 1 unless the coal operators and the government agree to a new deal and grant a new wage increase.

Lewis is hardly expected to stay within the Wage Stabilization Board's regulatory limits he has demanded. Lewis' action in announcing full support for the CIO fight on wage controls is a pretty good clear tip that he will insist on equal treatment for the miners.

● GIFT TROUBLES—Since the King subcommittee on tax scandals has placed the acceptance of gifts in bad repute, government officials and lobbyists are going to the other extreme to avoid suspicion.

An airplane manufacturer who used to serve free coffee and doughnuts during conferences with military officials is now charging them five cents.

Office Director Michael DiSalle warned his personnel that only presents that could be consumed within 48 hours should be accepted during the Christmas holidays.

However, an in-between attitude has been adopted by the Pentagon. Rep. Allen Oakley Hunter (R), California, reports that an unofficial spokesman says the department is not seriously concerned with such gifts as whiskey, candy, turkeys, hams, cigars, cigaret lighters and similar items, but would look askance at "really expensive gifts."

● "IKE" VS. SANTA—There is little doubt that Senator James H. Duff (R), Pennsylvania, never misses an opportunity in his drive to promote the GOP presidential nomination for Gen. Dwight Eisenhower.

The senator had a gay Christmas tree in his outer office during the holidays. But outside the vari-colored electric lights, the trimmings of the fir were far from convention.

The senator's Christmas tree was decorated not with tinsel—but with buttons announcing "I Like Ike." The Christmas tree buttons were the small type, but all around the office, instead of holly, were large circulars—almost mantle size—heralding the senator's favorite refrain "I Like Ike."

● WOOD FOR DEFENSE—Do not be surprised to see more and more wood used in new home construction.

The government is putting new steam behind its efforts to encourage greater use of wood and other substitutes in the face of shortages in steel, copper and aluminum vital to the defense effort.

To spur this drive, the National Production Authority has drawn up a list of about 50 major steel building items which it insists can be "made of wood without loss of strength or durability."

Of course, NPA has no way to make building product manufacturers and builders use wood in place of steel and other vital metals. However, it holds a big stick over the head of industry in the form of authority to deny them metal allocations and it has not hesitated to use this power in the past.

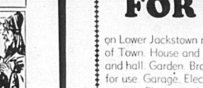
ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—Matthew 9:9-17; Luke 5:27-39.

By Alfred J. Buescher

Jesus, passing by saw a publican named Levi sitting at the seat of custom and He said to him "Follow Me," and the man rose up, left all and followed the Master.



That evening Levi gave a great feast in his house, and there was a big company of fellow publicans and of others that sat down with them at tables to eat and drink.

Scribes and Pharisees complained that Jesus and His disciples ate and drank with "publicans and sinners," and asked them why they did things that were forbidden Jews.

Jesus answered that "they that are whole need no physician, and that He came not to call the righteous, but sinners, to repentance.

Dairying Promoted In Anderson County

Dairying has become the top livestock enterprise in Anderson county, and furnishes farm incomes second to tobacco.

The dairy educational work of Laymon Miller, county agent for the University of Kentucky, the past year included pasture management, improved feeding practices, production of high-quality hay, artificial breeding, keeping accurate records and raising sow replacement on farms.

Artificial Breeding

The Anderson County Artificial Breeding Cooperative has made it possible for owners of small herds to breed to top bulls. This is increasing production per cow—finds a ready farmers replacement for their herds without going out of the county and without paying high prices for bulls.

Three hundred and forty-eight farmers have 2,507 cows in the breeding association, 1,637 of which have been bred artificially. The association also serves farmers in Mercer, Woodford and Franklin counties.

Forty-eight 4-H club members were enrolled in the dairy project in Anderson county. They made money from milk, exhibited stock at county, district and state shows, and gained a general knowledge of dairying, Miller reported.

Swimming in January might be recommended as standard procedure for people who can afford to take their dips at Miami Beach, Florida, but to try a few strokes around here at this time of this year certainly has its disadvantages. Henry Potts Young came out of the gym in Millersburg last week after attending a sporting event and headed for his car. Stepping on the sidewalk onto what he thought was soft earth, Potts found himself floundering in about four feet of cold water. Friends fished him out and rushed him to Ben Dumphrey's house where he was dried and returned home with a few bruises and a somewhat chastened experience.

After a few minutes of regaining his nerve and voice Sug returned to lead a thoughtful and interesting meeting.

Ardery Gives School Ruling

Franklin Circuit Court Judge William B Ardery directed the State's school fund be distributed on a basis of attendance in public school rather than the number of children included in the school census—which includes those not in attendance and those in private schools.

If the Ardery decision is upheld by the Court of Appeals, school districts in communities where there are substantial numbers of children attending parochial schools—such as Jefferson, Kenton, Campbell, Fayette, Henderson, Daviess and Union counties —would suffer substantial losses.

Secretary of the State Board of Pharmacy E. M. Josey announced that 18 persons, the entire class who took the test, passed the examination given by the State Board of Pharmacy.

Getting The Children To Bed

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

THE hot who usually gets to bed happy is fortunate. There may be times when you just have to pick up that two-year-old and give him his bath or put him to bed against his violent cries and kicks and other resistances. But if this happens night after night you will know that you need to find better resources for a happier baby and bedtime.

Aim to set a favorable stage before you announce the onerous event. It will help if you don't feed your baby candy or cake and about keeping the schedule right to the minute.

Time and Patience

It's not always easy to elicit ready cooperation suddenly. Often it takes time, skill and patience. If the youngster has a "house" of blocks almost finished, letting him complete it may be desirable. Of course, he may devise new ways for staying up a little longer, when you may have to say, "When that is finished," or "Just one more."

In case the bath precedes the nap or bedtime, you might well plan to have a story or two between, thus lessening or melting the resistance. During the bath, its preparation and aftermath, you might say nursery rhymes, suiting the action to the jingle. In ever so many ways you can make the bath time fun. Likewise in getting to bed may be made more satisfying to him, thanks to your resourcefulness. (My bulletin, "Sleep Problems: Their Prevention and Correction," may be had in a stamped envelope sent me in care of this paper.)
