Holiday Or Hollow-Day

For those of you planning on doing some driving during the Fourth of July weekend the National Safety Council recommends these eight rules to make the Fourth of July a "holiday instead of a hollow-day":

Make sure your car is in safe mechanical condition.

Start your trip in plenty of time, so you won't have to hurry.

Keep your speed down. Slow up here and show up there.

Pass other cars only if there is plenty of room.

Stay far enough behind other cars so that you can stop in an emergency.

Keep your temper, and be courteous and patient in heavy traffic.

Don't drive after drinking—even a little. Stop and rest whenever over-tired or sleepy.

Salute The Blue Caps

With the opening of the fourth Blackberry Festival this afternoon Carlisle will in the next few days again play host to thousands of homecomers and fun-seekers who come from near and far to participate in this celebration.

This year's celebration seems destined to break all previous attendance records and the well-planned program of entertainment should appeal to all age groups thereby making the Festival all inclusive.

Probably the highlight of the three-day event will be the concert given by the Shrine Band of Lexington the night of July 4. This band is noted throughout Central Kentucky as one of the finest and their programs are well received wherever given.

Among the crowd at the Festival will be several men wearing blue caps. These are the Legionnaires who are responsible for the homecoming. This year marks the first time that they have sponsored the event and they have been preparing for it enthusiastically for the past few weeks. They deserve the thanks of everyone for their fine work and if you get a chance during the Festival, let them know that you appreciate it.

Politically Speaking

With the coming of the national election in November this year, much speculation has been going on in our county about who will be Nicholas County Democratic campaign chairman for the presidential nominee.

In the interests of the party The Mercury would like to suggest to those who are in the position to appoint the chairman, that the name of County Clerk John F. Sugg be not overlooked.

Mr. Sugg has long been an active member of the Democratic party and probably knows more Democratic voters in Nicholas county than any other man, having registered them at one time or another during his lengthy tenure of office. The Mercury is firm in its belief that Mr. Sugg is capable of this position and that his appointment to this post will not be a disappointment to party members when the votes of Nicholas are tallied in November.

The Spirit Of 1976

Leaders in all lines of activity are increasing efforts to maintain the highest levels of integrity in the operation of business and industry. They are aware of the peril to the moral standards of the country as a whole which has accompanied revelations of widespread corruption in governmental. Our first concern is for young people from whose ranks must come tomorrow's leaders.

William H. Miller, an official of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, in speaking of the responsibilities of businessmen, points out that "Today's office boy may be president of your company by the U.S. celebrates its second centennial in 1976 . . . the training of executives begins with the young people who walk into your business out of high school or college. If businessmen and fathers are not going to make it clear to youngsters that practically all business is moral and ethical, who is?"

Mr. Miller suggests three ways in which businessmen can help children: "Give our own youngsters and others something money can't buy—our time. Be a good citizen! Be a good church member.

Twenty-one cars required to carry passengers on excursion train from Maysville and Cincinnati, through Carlisle and Paris, last Sunday.

After lashing to bully a crew of Kentucky pipeline workers who were spanning a labor union against their will a small mob of gunmen got a notice that they would return in bigger force. But they didn't get a return.

Why didn't the mob return? Let's use the same reason other mobs back down. The pipeline crew, backed by law enforcement officials and citizens of the community, were ready to meet violence with power and lead.

Leaders of mobs are cowards. Usually their game is intimidation. And they back down when they are met with armed resistance. When their intended victims are unable to resist, mobsters will be mobsters all over again.

Not so long ago a mob moved in on an independent coal mine in the Madisonville district. It was Sunday. An elderly steward worker was alone on the premises. The mob lined up in two rows and forced the helpless man to run gauntlet. Every mobster in the line kicked him as he went by. It was one of the most brutal mob outrages ever committed.

Leaders in the Hopkins county outrage were indicted for murder. After their trial was postponed several times the case was compromised with a fine.

More than once threats to smash up his newspaper plant have been whispered to Edgar Arnold, editor and publisher of the Madisonville Messenger. Arnold whispered right back that a reception committee would meet the hammer swinging boys with buckshot and bullets.

Thus far the hammer boys haven't turned up.

Courageous resistance is one thing lawless labor unites to respect. And strict law enforcement is the only hope of the people who want to see Kentucky respected by themselves and the rest of the nation. The rank and file of union wage earners themselves would profit by law enforcement against their greedy, arrogant union bosses.

Your correspondent has no quarrel with unions that obey the law. During the last century they have seen unionism lift wage earners from squalor to comparative plenty. So far as we know, working people had no other way up.

But union bosses with no respect for law must be compelled to obey the law.

Law-abiding union leaders have the respect of the public, and always will have it.

OHIO DEAN SPEAKS AT UK CONFERENCE

Farmers take note—It was reported to this office recently that Elmer Ritchie of Barrenville has discovered a new way to keep the grasshoppers out of his tobacco. Ritchie, it is reported, beats the brush along the fence row about dusk and the grasshoppers jump upon the fence to roost for the night. After this process is repeated several nights, the "hoppers" become trained and about nightfall hop upon the fence to roost, thereby staying out of the tobacco. Of course, this was all reported unofficially, and we haven't really seen it . . .

Father Raymond Miller, who has been on a business trip through Wisconsin and those parts called at the office one day last week and told us that the heat up there wasn't too bad. He said it stayed around 76 to 82 degrees most of the time. 'Oh to Wisconsin' . . .

Speaking of heat everybody seems to be trying to beat it with only indifferent success—except the boys on the local highway department crew have attached a big fan to the motor that runs their trucks . . . quite a nifty system. Bill Gilkey, who was in past weekend was down in Mads on the 4th and VOW despite said it was really terrible, that the only relief he got from the heat was when the fan was on—he might when they had a big fan on Lexington Avenue was calling. When they turned the thing on it was so strong it blew his collar right off his neck and the weatherman, getting wind of the situation, promptly packed down his ashes during the afternoon. It was also the first time in a week that he's had up, that, as soon as it quit . . .

Hoyd Gilbert and A. R. Fisher were up to the office in the head of the day Thursday to get a look at seven in the window of our front office, which was our feeble attempt to defeat the heat . . . well, Hoyd lost two of three pounds betting with it, and Fisher got what he wanted, the Hoyd, it does help some . . .

Either Joe Lutz or I one will have to change our name . . . Being similar in their names and appearance the same written with pen and pencil, Joe and I are continually getting each others laundry mail and what have you. Our most recent episode happened last week when Joe got two packages delivered to his front door step. Since they hailed out by the ones I had been trying to trace for three days . . .

It's too hot for words—have a good time here at home on the South during the Tegaro Big Blackberry Festival.

INSIDE WASHINGTON — MARCH OF EVENTS

Italian Neo-Fascist Rise Inks U. S. Policy-Makers

Success in Late Elections Cause of Grave Concern

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—The surprising outcome of the Neo-Fascists in the 1948 record Italian election, together with grave concern in American policy-makers who already are burdened with numerous Communist headaches.

United States diplomats say it would be immoral indeed, were Italy to be saved from Communism only to be ruptured by the hard hand of Fascism who also would impose a totalitarian government.

The same problem exists in West Germany, where Neo-Nazis form an extremely active minority, a troublesome one at that. Nevertheless, the Nazis and Fascists are the Communists.

Steps are being taken to meet the emotional situation United States propaganda, who here-before have aimed their shots solely at the Reds now are turning the Italians and Germans that Fascism also leads to destruction.

Meanwhile, United States officials on the two countries are exerting all pressure and economic means pressure to choke off the new threats from the reformed ghosts of the past.

also none trouble in Latin America and are growing more and more concerned over the new Argentine president of our southern neighbors within the United Nations. The Latin American countries ranked about one-third of the votes in the UN general assembly, plus some important executive posts, and have been of vital aid to the United States on the floor against Communist tactics.

Now, however, their attitude seems to be changing somewhat. Instead of going along with the United States on all votes the Latins are now showing some tendency to vote against our policies.

That's been particularly true since the battle against colonialism in the Suez and North Africa and the Latins have broken away from the United States on economic issues.

The problem is a complicated one, proportions yet, and perhaps never will. However, officials in Washington want to avoid any dispute that may follow, especially since they are paying a bit more attention to the Latin needs of the hemisphere.

★ POLITICAL BOOMERANG—Republicans are worried for fear that the defeat of the Israel Security bill in the House, largely because of GOP opposition, is a boomerang that may hit them next year's elections.

It could turn into a major political blunder if the spirit among the anti-Semites there should prevail and defeat the defeat of the Israel proposal to increase their Israel Security payments and liberalize the law.

Fully aware of this possibility, the Republicans are trying desperately to get the House to act on a GOP-sponsored bill of a similar nature, and there are predictions that they will succeed.

Democratic leaders have been trying to forestall the reconsideration of the measure overriding, but for the time being they are willing to let the Republicans have a whip.

Of course, if the bill comes up again, it probably will pass without trouble although with some reconsideration.

★ JET TRANSPORTS—The Air Force's sudden interest of its stand on jet transports has apparently opened the way for construction of such a plane in this country, probably early in 1953.

The Air Force, which has stayed that jet bombers get priority over the jet airliners, as soon as have changed its mind because of the recent successful flight of a British jet transport between London to South Africa.

When American manufacturers were called before the Air Force to explain this British jump on them, they pointed out that the Air Force had told them to concentrate on bombers instead . . .

As a result, congressional pressure was brought to bear on the Defense Department because even if United States manufacturers start work immediately on an experimental model, they could not put a jet airliner into commercial operation until 1957.

Since the airlines, manufacturers and Congress are all unwilling to grant the British any more of a head start, the Air Force found itself alone in opposing the jet transport and gave in.

Some Helps for Poor Readers

By GERRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

MANY students who last year failed of history passed in one or more subjects are very poor readers. They really didn't fail in history, essentially, science and the like. They failed in reading. To learn well from the printed page is to read well; to get meaning from the words there.

These students, obviously, need help in learning to read better. Some of them might secure such help this summer and think today no their arrears and be better able to succeed at books next fall.

Working Against Watch

With no blurbs written on the subject, I'm getting many requests about poor readers and possibility of their improvement. Here are before anyone that the best way to progress is by work against the watch.

Of course, any person who is not, or who sets himself, to work against time may gain in reading speed if in doing so he concentrates better and puts forth more effort. But the average poor reader in the grades, high school or college, who finds it difficult to learn from his textbook, isn't going to gain much from emphasizing speed on his own account or when hurried by some other person. His problem is not to hurry, but rather to do the opposite, and to take his good time at getting meaning from the printed page.

His first need is to gain some fluency in reading with a purpose, to get meaning. There's no value in his merely pronouncing the words, of course, yet he may need to acquire some facility at doing the words, phrases and sentences as he sees them on the page before he will get very far on more meaning.

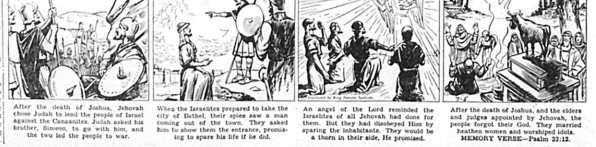
In the Time of the Judges — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Judges 1:1-3:6; 21:24-25.



After the death of Joshua, Jehovah chose Judah to lead the people of Israel against the Canaanites. Judah asked his brother, Simeon, to go with him, and the two led the people to war.

When the Israelites prepared to take the city of Bethel, their spies saw a man coming out of the town. They asked him to show them the entrance, promising to spare his life if he did.

An angel of the Lord reminded the Israelites of all Jehovah had done for them. But they had disobeyed Him by sparing the inhabitants. They would be a thorn in their side, He promised.

After the death of Joshua, and the elders and judges appointed by Jehovah, the people forgot their God. They married heathen women and worshiped idols.

TO IMPROVE HILL LAND

Eulan Justice of Pike county secured the suggestions of UK County Agent Harold G. Dowdy in planning a long-time improvement program for his 1,200 acres of mountain land. In the small bottom fields he plans to establish pastures and meadows, and then begin cutting and clearing brush from the hillsides, so they can be put to growing grass. Additional improvements will include drainage, fencing and building.

Strawberries Need After-Harvest Care

Interest in strawberries, due in part to the good season, has brought the following suggestions for care of the patch after harvest from the UK Horticulture Department.

Mow the field with a farm mower or the patch with a scythe. Do not disturb crowns, but remove old leaf stalks. This will stimulate the crowns to produce new foliage for buds for the 1953 crop.

Broadcast 500 to 700 pounds of complete fertilizer; for example, 6-8-6, putting most of it directly into the rows. Rake off old leaves and stalks and pile them up to use as mulch next winter.

Cultivate between the rows, thoroughly pulverizing the ground. Most growers prefer to leave the old original rows 18 to 20 inches wide.

Continue cultivation of middles through July, August and early September, or even later, so runners won't develop to interfere with the next berry harvest. The ground level from the first cultivation, so as to help prevent moisture from age.

Four Meetings Set For Hereford Breeders

The Kentucky Hereford Association and the University of Kentucky are cooperating in a series of four meetings for breeders of whiteface cattle.

The first meeting will be at Steelway Farm in Bourbon county July 8.

On July 9, the Pulaski County Hereford Association will cooperate in a meeting at Beryl Weddle's farm in that county in the forenoon and at Ira Yeary's farm, also in Pulaski county, in the afternoon.

Breeders will meet July 10 with John Dixon, near Howell in South Christian county.

The fourth meeting will be at the J. H. Stephens farm near Glasgow July 11.

Cattle will on display at each farm, and there will be judging contests, demonstrations in trimming feet and handling animals, and discussions of herd management, constructing drainage ditches, installing drain tile, planting forest trees, and improving stands of forest trees.

In some counties other practices are approved for ACP aid. These include a soil-testing service in 49 counties and clearing bush land for permanent pasture, in several counties.

Technical supervision of the following 1952 ACP practices will be handled by the Soil Conservation Service: Stockwater development, terracing, contouring crops, diversion ditches, open ditch drainage, and tile drainage. Approval of the forestry service, state or Federal is required for tree planting and forestry improvement practices.

Ninety Percent Of Nicholas Farmers Enrolled In ACP Program For 1952

Slightly less than three-fourths of Kentucky farmers are enrolled in the 1952 Agriculture Conservation Program, R. O. Wilson, chairman of the Production and Marketing Administration state committee, has announced .

A total of 157,361 state farmers are signed up in the program, 6,859 less than the 164,220 enrolled in the 1951 ACP.

The total enrolled, Wilson said, is 73.4 percent of the state's total of 214,356 farm operators. In 1951, when the total number of farm operators in the state was slightly larger, 75 percent enrolled in the ACP.

Most of the decline in the number of farmers in the program was reported in recently industrialized areas of the state, the state PMA chairman said. Participation in McCracken county, for instance, dropped more than 800 below 1951.

As a percentage of 1951 enrollment, participation in the 1952 ACP in the county is down 46 percent.

Declines in the number of farmers in the 1952 program are similar, but less severe, in several other counties in the Paducah, Owensboro, Cincinnati, and Ashland areas.

32 Counties Increase

On the other hand, Wilson declared, enrollment in the 1952 ACP increased in 32 Kentucky counties. The largest percentage increase was in Bell county where 64 percent more farmers were signed up in 1952 than in 1951. Of the 938 farmers in the county, 823 were signed up.

In Laurel county, where a special "new approach" is being tried in the ACP this year, the number of farmers enrolled for 1952 increased 20 percent over 1951. Of the 3,444 farmers listed in the county, 3,290 signed up in the 1952 program compared with 2,723 in the 1951 ACP.

Twenty-two counties in 1952, compared with 23 in 1951, enrolled 90 percent or more of their farmers in the ACP. These counties are Bourbon, Harrison, Scott, Woodford, Bracken, Owen, Robertson, Shelby, Simpson, Todd, Adair, Barren, Cumberland, Metcalfe, Taylor, Nicholas, Garrard, Laurel, Montgomery, Wolfe, Estill, and Jessamine.

Farmers in the ACP this year were required to designate in advance of soil and water conservation practices they planned to adopt. If a change is to be made in designated conservation practices on which ACP aid is requested, the farmer is required to ask for the change, give his reasons for making it, and get approval of the county committee before the practice is carried out.

Available To All

ACP aid is available in each county on at least 17 practices for farms where these practices have been approved. Practices are liming farm land, applying phosphate and potash to legumes and grasses, applying rock or colloidal phosphate to non-crop pasture or certain grass or legume crops, establishing winter legume cover crops, establishing small grain winter cover crops (seeded in the fall of 1951), establishing annual lespedeza, disking or plowing under sweetclover, establishing or improving permanent pasture, excavating or impounding stockwater ponds, constructing terraces, planting or sodding permanent waterways, contour farming of row crops, constructing diversion chan-
