Minimum Cadet Age Reduced To 19 Years

The minimum age for entrance of applicants into Aviation Cadet Pilot and Aircraft Officer training has been reduced to 19 years, Sgt. Tanner, aviation commander of the local U. S. Army Air Force Recruiting Station in Cynthiana announced today.

Sgt. Tanner added that, in addition to the reduced age limit, the processing procedure for applicants into Aviation Cadet training has been revised and the program itself has been enlarged to the extent that it is now possible for a person to be accepted into training a month after they first appear at the recruiting station.

Cadets who are qualified between now and April will be considered for assignment to the April 27 class. He said. Later classes convene July 12 and August 19.

Basic qualifications for acceptance into Aviation Cadet program for training are: applicant must be male single, between the ages of 19 and 26; and have completed at least 12 years of college.

Present Selective Service regulations authorize a four month deferment to fully qualified applicants who are awaiting assignment to Aviation Cadet classes.
