Pioneer Salt Furnaces Uncovered At Blue Licks

Digging at Blue Licks last week revealed the stone where early Kentucky pioneers, such as Daniel Boone and Simon Kenton, came to the "Licks" to make salt to supply themselves and their settlements.

Old stone furnaces, dating back to around 1777, were uncovered by excavation immediately behind the Blue Lick hotel by Ed Hunter, owner of the property.

Several of the furnaces, used to boil water down to salt, were destroyed in the excavation, done with a bull dozer, but Hunter managed to preserve several. He stopped the project before it went into two mounds, almost sure spots to find other furnaces.

The furnaces were several feet deep and measured some 12 to 15 feet in length. Made from rocks piled upon each other with mud filler, the furnaces were in a good state of preservation.

Also uncovered during the project was an iron kettle, probably used for cooking purposes, and a knife with a deerhorn handle, plus several pieces of salt kettles.

Mr. Hunter stated that he probably would continue the digging this week and would attempt to preserve any more furnaces that he might run across.

The furnaces were discovered just a few feet from the famed Blue Lick Spring, which supplied the pioneers with water from which to make their salt.

To The Carlisle High School Alumni

Beginning the year 1952 the Alumni Association of the Carlisle high school found themselves burdened with debts, and no immediate prospect of paying them were seen. Since that time the Association has tried to eliminate some of these deficits in an attempt to get the Association in the clear and back on its feet.

For these reasons the Association decided that it would not be expedient to have the annual Alumni Banquet. Over the past several years the bouquet has added to the debt of the Association and there was good reason to believe that this year's affair would do the same. Therefore, the decision not to hold the banquet was reached.

However, since that decision has been made public, there has been considerable comment and criticism that it was not to be held. The criticism was so strong that the Association reversed their decision and decided to hold the banquet.

It will be held in Williams Restaurant Thursday night, May 22 at six o'clock. Seating for 117 people including the graduating class can be arranged. Cost of the dinner will be $1.00 and dues will be 75 cents. To be paid on or before the night of the banquet.

Out-of-town alumni wishing reservations are asked to call 99 or 426-W for reservations. The Association hopes that this occasion will meet with enough response to merit its continuation.

The financial situation of the Association will be discussed at the banquet and decisions on its future will be reached.

Signed,
Chas. C. Shrout, president and 1952 Officers, CHS Alumni Assn.

The baccalaureate program will open with the processional, "Triumphal and Circumstance," by the CHS band. Rev. G. W. Townsend will give the invocation. The Carlisle Mixed Chorus will sing "Magnificat" and Rev. W. R. Raborn will read the scripture.

Carlisle High School Junior And Senior Students Take In Interesting Sights On Tour Through South

By Betty Caywood

Despite the fact of our late departure, our trip was a happy one. We were scheduled to leave at seven but we didn't get started until about eight thirty due to the failure of our bus driver to appear. Glenn Lykins, who had to be replaced with another driver. We picked up Mr. Lykins in Lexington who said he had overslept.

Our first stop was My Old Kentucky Home in Bardstown. Here we toured the garden and house and ate on the picnic grounds there.

Next we stopped at Lincoln's Memorial near Hodgenville. Everyone was thirsty but afraid to go and get a drink because of the report of several of the girls of having seen a snake in the spring.

In the afternoon we traveled through parts of Kentucky that we had never seen before and finally arrived at our destination for the first night—Mammouth Cave. We took an hour and a half trip through the cave and saw many interesting spectacles, one being the famous "Frozen Niagara". Another thrilling experience of this trip was a boat ride on Crystal Lake. After this we felt we could do justice to a good size meal so we had a big weiner roast on the picnic grounds of the park.

See Nashville

The next day we were up bright and early but this time not quite as cheerfully. We ate breakfast in Chattanooga after which we traveled up Lookout Mountain where we explored and viewed some of the historic battlefields of the Civil War. Another attraction of Lookout Mountain was the incline—a railroad going straight up the side of the mountain.

Before seeing it some of us had decided that we would like to ride it but when we saw it in operation we soon changed our minds.

Eat In Knoxville

Lunch the third day was eaten in Knoxville. Again we ate in a cafeteria and as before everyone turned around and stared as we filed by.

Somewhere between Knoxville and Gatlinburg we passed a field of red clover and someone was heard to exclaim, "Oh! look at the strawberries." Other than this our trip was uneventful.

We arrived in Gatlinburg in time to rest awhile before dressing and going to eat. We found many means of recreation here in which to participate. Among these were bicycle riding, horse back riding, skating, and square dancing and you may be sure we did our best to try them all.

The next day we began our journey through the Smokies. All went well until we got up far enough for our ears to start popping. Then, whenever you looked around everyone was yawning in order to hear again.

Black Bear Appears

Our trip through the Smokies was made complete by the appearance of a black bear which was in the middle of the road. Our bus driver had to stop suddenly in order to keep from hitting it. Mr. Lykins got out and chased it off the road.
