Council Discusses Water; Postpone Definite Action

To Meet Monday To Decide Method Of Increasing Supply

Chief item on the agenda at the regular meeting of the city council Monday night was the question of what to do regarding the water supply for the city.

A public reading of several proposals submitted by the Howard K. Bell consulting engineers firm of Lexington were heard and discussed although definite action on the proposals was postponed until Monday night when the council plans to meet again to decide the question.

The plan chiefly favored by the Lexington firm was the one which would raise the lower dam five feet and grout the leaks in the upper dam besides doing other work. Estimates as to the cost of this operation run around $32,000.

Another plan to increase the water supply was the grouting of leaks in the upper dam and clearing out some silt in the upper lake. This plan would cost around $6,-000 the estimate said.

Pipe-line Out

The laying of a water pipe-line to either Hinkston creek or Licking River would cost in the $100,-00 or over category, the Bell report stated, and none of the council seemed to favor this method for increasing the supply.

The feasibility of the various plans, methods of financing and recommendations of Water Superintendent Joe Clay were heard and discussed. Mayor Talbert asked the councilmen to think over the various possibilities of increasing the supply and at the meeting Monday night be ready to decide on definite action.

On motion of Councilman Shelman Hamm, seconded by Councilman George Gaffin, it was voted to patch the holes in Walnut street.

The council also discussed a building recently constructed by George and Clifton Waugh on Main street adjoining Kerns restaurant. The building does not meet the fire laws, it was reported, and City Attorney Roger Womack was instructed to contact the owners to see about its removal or reconstruction to conform with the state fire and zoning laws.

Fiscal Court Sets Up Rural Road Program

The Nicholas County Fiscal Court met in regular session Tuesday afternoon and set up their 1953 rural highway program. Mr. Johnny Sparrier, rural highway engineer for this district, met with the court to help them set up the program.

The county was allotted $25,000 for work on rural roads in the county this summer. County Judge Spencer Taylor stated this week that $3,040 of this amount will be used for drainage on the Morning Glory road and that $250 will be used for drainage on the Caldwell road.

He stated that the balance of the fund would go toward resurfacing with stone the gravel roads in the county and that part of it would be used for repairing county black-top roads.

The fiscal court also voted to donate $75 to the Cancer drive.

The group raised the budget of the Nicholas County health unit $600 for the coming fiscal year. This makes the health unit's budget not stand at $2,954 per year.

The court met again Wednesday afternoon to approve the sheriff's settlement for 1952 taxes.
