Paul's Conflicts in Corinth

ENEMIES ASSAILED HIM, BUT HE HAD GOD'S PROTECTION

Scripture—Acts 15:36—18:22.

By NEHMAN CAMPBELL

ONE OF the most interesting things about traveling is the people you meet. In his many missionary journeys Paul met many people—some were friendly, but others were bitter enemies and friends. There were also those who had a desire to know more gospel and were curious to hear its teaching.

In the very beginning of our lesson we see Paul and Barnabas departing of two good friends and fellow missionaries. They were Paul and Barnabas who had made the first missionary journey together. It was Barnabas you recall, who had interceded for Paul when the members of the Jerusalem church distrusted him.

As they were about to begin their second missionary journey, Barnabas was determined to take John Mark with them. Paul, however, seems to have distrusted Mark and, as Paul had been deserted by Mark 12½ years before, Barnabas taking John Mark with him and Paul taking Silas. Later we read in I Corinthians 15:6, Paul wrote that he and Barnabas "are of one mind," and he also referred to trust Mark.

On the first part of Paul's journey he visited and Lystra he met Timothy, son of a Jewess. He was a believer, and a Greek father. This is the same Timothy to whom Paul addressed two of his epistle letters, and who in and it have been the first bishop of Ephesus.

And so were the churches established in the faith, and increasing in number daily. Everywhere they were planting in good soil in the work, but the Holy Spirit forbade them to go to Asia. Then Paul had a vision at night of a man of Macedonia who urged him to "come over" Macedonia to help us.

Feeling that the Lord had called them to preach the gospel in Europe, they sailed from Troas and arrived in Philippi, chief city of Macedonia. There was no synagogue in Philippi, due to the fact that there were few or no real Jews in the city. Under those circumstances, they were apt to worship in homes or on the out-of-doors.

And on the Sabbath we went out of the city by a river side, where prayer was wont to be made; and we sat down, and spake unto the women which resorted thither." Luke must have joined Paul on this journey as he uses the pronoun "we," indicating that he was present.

There was a certain woman named Lydia, there, a business woman—seller of purple (the royal color)—and her heart was turned to Christ, and when she had listened to Paul she and all her household were baptized. She also urged the disciples to be her guests.

Paul made enemies when he cast out a devil from a damsel who "possessed a spirit of divination," and who followed Paul and his companions everywhere. There disorderly city at the time, but fell in love with a people who loved to dispute philosophizes and religions. They took Paule to Mars Hill where he addressed them.

"Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious. For as I passed by and beheld your devotions, I found an altar with this inscription, To the Unknown God. Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, Him declare I unto you."

When Paul told the Athenians of the Resurrection, some mocked and others said, "We will hear thee again of this matter." Certain men did believe, however.

In Corinth, Paul's next stop, he met Aquilas and Priscilla, his wife, both Christians, and as they were tentmakers, he stayed with them.

Here Crispus, ruler of the synagogue, believed in the Lord. Here the Lord spoke to Paul in a vision, telling him not to fear, as He, the Lord, was with him. Enemies assailed him even here, dragging him before the Roman ruler, Gallio, accusing him of persuading men "to worship God contrary to the law."

However, Gallio was not the man to offend anyone if he could help it, and he refused to let the matter of wrong doing be could pass judgment, but as it was a religious matter among the Jews themselves, it was out of his province. And he drove the accusers out of the judgment seat.

The same examiner—J. Carl Ronskopf—recommended to State Commissioner of Motor Transportation John M. Kinnaird that the Lexington Railway Co. be denied a fare increase on the ground that existing rates are ample to yield a fair return on the company's investment.
