PLANTING TIME...
Whenever you see new telephone poles being "planted" and rural lines strung, it means service for folks who didn't have it before—service that helps get things done on the farm and in the home.

Every month, Southern Bell is adding about 4,000 new rural telephone lines. That's the kind of progress we like to report because we're doing a lot of known-how, materials and money to rural telephone expansion.

THE GARDEN
John S. Gardner, University of Kentucky, Watermelon and Cantaloupe
Much that was said here applies to watermelons and cantaloupes when they are grown in a garden. When grown in a garden, they should be fertilized with liquid manure, with perhaps a dash of the same fertilizer used on the lawn. For a 6 by 6 foot bed, use 5 to 6 of a fertilizer.

Bankers Hear How To Keep Youth Down On The Farm
How more young men could be encouraged to stay on the farm was discussed at an agricultural credit conference held through the cooperation of the Kentucky Bankers Association and the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics. Young men are leaving farms at an increasing rapid rate, it was said. As a result, population in rural counties has declined. In some instances more than 50 per cent in 10 years. In some regions, four-fifths of the people on farms now are more than 35 years old.
