Nicholas County High School Seniors Go To Washington

By Polly Wagoner

The Senior class, three sponsors, and Mr. R. Steward, C. and O. supervisor of school trips, left last Wednesday afternoon from Lexington for a four-day tour of the Capitol city.

We boarded the George Washington at four o'clock. Riding the train was a new experience for most of us.

After supper the porter got us some card tables and some of us played cards and games of all kinds. We made several stops, our longest at Ashland, but it wasn't long until we were again on our way toward our destination.

About twelve o'clock the lights were dimmed and some of us tried to get some sleep but didn't have much success at the task. I think there were some who stayed up all night, much to their regret, the next day.

We arrived in Washington about 9:15 a. m. Thursday where we boarded a sightseeing bus for the day's tour.

See National Capitol

Our first stop was at the National Capitol. We visited the Senate Chamber, and the Hall of Representatives' but neither was in session at the time.

Another very interesting room was Statuary Hall where many famous statues are on display. The most interesting to us was that of Henry Clay, representing Kentucky, and Will Rogers who said that he wanted to be where he could see what was going on in Congress. His statue is facing the Senate Chambers.

From the Capitol building we went to the Bureau of Printing and Engraving, a huge building which is a part of the United States Treasury. There they print the National currency, Government bonds, postage and revenue stamps. It employs 4,000 people and has an average daily output of between six and seven million dollars.

We saw them printing $1 bills to $100 bills. They also print $1,000 bills and $100,000 bills but to our disappointment we couldn't get any for souvenirs.

On our way to the White House we passed the United States Department of Agriculture. It is the second largest building in the world.

Stop At White House

Driving on down the famous Pennsylvania avenue, we stopped at the White House, home of the President of the United States. The beautiful structure is built of white — painted gray — Virginia sandstone. We visited four very beautiful rooms: the Ball Room, Green Room, Blue Room and Red Room.

The Blue Room is the President's own reception room and is dominated by a blue silk satin material with a large classic motif in gold on a blue field. It is considered the most beautiful room in the White House.

The Green Room's walls and draperies are covered with green silk damask, and on the walls hang portraits of former presidents.

The Red Room is also richly decorated in red silk damask.

Our next stop was the Pan-American Building, made of 19 different kinds of marble. It is the headquarters for the 21 American Republics. Among the many features to be found in the building is the celebrated "Patio", containing many exotic plants and trees, and a marble fountain symbolizing the progress of the American republic.

Visit Unknown Soldier Tomb

From the Pan American building we went to the Arlington National Cemetery, where we saw the famous tomb of the Unknown Soldier. We witnessed the touching ceremony of the changing of the guard.

Next, we went to the city of Alexandria, Virginia, where we lunched in a beautiful tea room, formerly George Washington's old club room. After lunch we drove around the city while the driver pointed out sites of historical interest. While driving along the Potomac we saw the presidential yacht.

After our tour of the city, we went to Mount Vernon, the home of George Washington. We went through the home of Washington and saw the bedroom in which he died.

After this we went down to the ivy covered tomb of Martha and George Washington.

Take Night Tour

We left Mount Vernon about four o'clock and went to the Annapolis Hotel, our trip headquarters. After dining there we went on a night tour of the city which was a beautiful sight. First, we went to the Lincoln Memorial, next, to the Library of Congress, where we saw the original documents of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States. Next, we drove through the Pentagon Building; a five-sided building covering 34 acres of land.

Going to the National Airport we passed the White House and the Capitol Building, very beautifully lighted at night.

At the airport we saw several large planes coming in and going out. We also saw the hangar in which the President's plane, the Columbine, is kept. We went back to our hotel about ten o'clock where everyone was soon fast asleep.

Friday morning we were awakened by our telephone saying it was time to get up for breakfast. After breakfast a sight-seeing bus took us to the Washington Monument, a giant structure standing 555 feet and 5 inch tall. Unfortunately for breakfast we had Wheaties and after walking the 898 steps to the top we could easily see why they served us Wheaties. From the top of the monument we looked down on the beautiful city of Washington. Next we traveled to the Smithsonian Institute and the United States National Museum, two very beautiful buildings housing everything from prehistorical animals to modern conveniences. I think the most interesting thing to most of us in the Smithsonian institution was the famous Kitty Hawk, the original plane of the Wright Brothers. On our way over to these two buildings we also drove told us that it is said that if you spent one minute looking at each display eight hours a day, six days a week, it would take 53 years to see everything in the two buildings. So you see that we didn't even get a start.

The Return Home

From there we left the city and went to Annapolis, Maryland where we had dinner at Lord Calvert Inn. Then to the United States Naval Academy where we toured the grounds and went through some of the buildings. We went on board a small boat that was docked in the Chesapeake Bay. We left the Academy about four o'clock Saturday morning to Union Station where we got on the train and headed for home. We arrived in Lexington about eight o'clock Saturday morning. Everyone hated to see the trip come to an end but we all realized that all good things have to come to an end.

Cooper Introduces Social Security Bill For Teachers

A bill to extend social security coverage to public school elementary and high-school teachers was introduced in the Senate last week by Senator John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky. At the present time, all employees covered by a municipal or state retirement system are excluded from the social security laws.

The legislation proposed by the Kentucky Senator would extend social security coverage to teachers on a voluntary basis. The bill spells out a definite procedure that must be followed to give the teachers involved a full opportunity to express their choice of going into the social security system or retaining present retirement benefits.

CAPITAL ROUNDUP

APPOINTMENT MADE

Five of the six members of the State Committee for Public Health were reappointed by Governor Wetherby with a new appointee being named to fill another post.

Dr. Richard J. Rapp, Newport, was named to replace Dr. W. Vinson Purse, Covington, whose term has expired, while these members were reappointed for four-year terms ending December 31, 1956: Dr. Clyde C. Sparks, Ashland, Harper Garton, Dr. A. B. Caswell, the Rev. Walter T. Munday and Harry N. Schuster, all of Louisville.

The Governor also named Wiliam G. Herzel, research official in the Department of Revenue, to replace former Commissioner of Revenue H. Clyde Reeves as a member of the Kentucky Hospital Advisory Council.

CITIES MAY TAX

Cities may impose automobile license taxes against non-resident owners whose vehicles use the streets of the city regularly, Assistant Attorney General Walter C. Herdman ruled in holding that Harlan may impose such a levy against a Barter resident who works in the former community.

MUST PAY TAX

The Department of Revenue has ruled that a Kentucky resident who works and earns a living in West Virginia is subject to the State income tax in Kentucky—but may be credited with any amount paid in the other State so to avoid a double burden on the taxpayer."

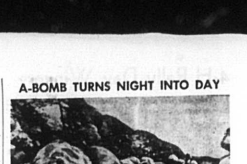
A-BOMB TURNS NIGHT INTO DAY



WHERE NIGHT RESIGNED only a second before, a Marine-filled trench at Yucca Flat, Nev., is suddenly plunged into the blinding light of an atomic bomb detonated 4,000 yards away from the men. After the explosion, the Leathernecks advanced 2,000 yards toward ground zero in an attack on an imaginary beachhead. (International Soundphoto)

State Has 150,000 To Fill Factory Jobs

Kentucky has a current potential labor supply of more than 150,000 workers who would accept factory jobs if available, according to an estimate of the Division of Employment Service of the Department of Economic Security.

"Kentucky remains a state with more potential industrial workers than jobs, despite sharp employment gains during the last few years," E. P. Jones, director of the service, said. "Total non-agricultural employment was 611,000 last September (the last month for which data is available) — compared with 599,000 in September 1951 and 551,000 in September 1948 — previous records for comparable months."

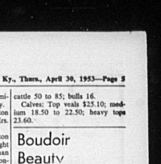
Boudoir Beauty



By VERA WINSTON

LINGERIE is getting lovelier all the time and also becoming very easy to launder. A new blend of acetate and rayon is the fabric used for this pretty number. The falsetic has a puckered finish that's built in. The style is simple and ever so flattering with its long graceful lines. The curved neckline and short puffed sleeves give a pretty effect, as does the criss-cross satin ribbon sash that ties in a string bow in front and gives the bodice a classic Grecian look.
