Homemakers Study Home Improvement

A survey of the 22 homemakers clubs in Barren county indicates the unusual interest of rural women in the study of improved homes, according to Mrs. Emma W. Bybee, home demonstration agent with the University of Kentucky.

Some of the results reported are: 56 members arranged furniture for better grouping, color, pattern and texture were improved in 385 rooms in 95 homes; 24 soft floor coverings and 223 pieces of furniture were bought; window treatments were improved in 306 rooms in all homes; 125 pairs of curtains were changed to make them a correct length; and 45 homemakers rearranged accessories more attractively.

Pasture Winners Named In October

Judging for Bourbon Master Farmer-Farm Homemaker awards will be done during the week of Oct. 12, B. W. Lotspeich, Extension dairy specialist, announced. Winners of automatic attendance awards also will be announced next week.

Each of the 16 districts can send seven or eight speakers and each county may nominate one man for the award. A judging team will visit each of the nominees in a district to see his pasture farming program. Owner of the most outstanding program will be the district winner.

Representatives of agencies and organizations supporting the Green Pastures program will make up the judging teams.

Small Grains Help In Sound Farm Policy

More fall-sown small grains should be grown in Kentucky, according to David A. Reid, author of a circular on small grains, published by the College of Agriculture and Home Economics of the University of Kentucky.

Wheat, rye, barley and oats have an important place in a sound agricultural policy, he notes. They produce grain and pasture, reduce erosion and leaching and provide for the use of land, labor and machinery. The importance of small grains as cover crops is emphasized.

Ask a county agent or write to the college at Lexington for a copy of Extension Circular 476, "Small-Grain Production in Kentucky."

The number of electrified farms in Kentucky is now more than 190,000 compared with 42,288 in 1940.

Fayette Chorus To Sing In Boston National Meet

The Fayette County Homemakers Chorus of 24 voices will sing on the program of the 17th annual National Home Demonstration Council meeting in Boston, Mass., Aug. 29 to Sept. 3. They will open the program at which Governor Christian A. Herter of Massachusetts will speak.

The half-hour program, made up in part of Stephen Foster selections, will be directed by Mrs. Lewis Robinson.

The homemakers will travel by chartered bus, necessary funds having been raised through rummage sales, by their singing at luncheon clubs, and through contributions from homemakers clubs in the county.

Mrs. Ruth Saunders, home demonstration agent with the University of Kentucky, and Mrs. G. T. Errickson, accompanist, also will make the trip.

One of the first homemakers' choruses in the state to be organized, the group has been singing for the past six years under the leadership of Mrs. Robinson, and has made several state-wide appearances.

Allen county homemakers have made 121 braided rugs and 226 lampshades and have woven seats in 232 chairs and stools.
