Blades Of Bluegrass

By Boyd Keenan

Lexington, Ky.—If you think the recent development of the hydrogen bomb has caused excitement in our world, you should have been around several hundred years ago when the bow and arrow was invented.

This idea was expressed recently by a visiting lecturer at the University of Kentucky. Prof. John B. Wolf of the University of Minnesota, an authority on European history, likened the hysteria which has arisen from the discovery of the latest of man's terrifying weapons to that felt when thinkers recognized the significance of the bow and arrow.

Speaking before a UK Blazer Lecture audience, the European expert asserted that he wasn't "worried about mankind destroying himself during my lifetime." The Minnesota historian is one of a few social scientists who have offered much comfort since the first atomic bomb blast during World War II.

"I'm afraid we'll be worrying about many other 'bows and arrows' and 'hydrogen bombs' before the end," Prof. Wolf quipped in his address.

Mark Twain, the master of American wit since his first stories captured the nation 85 years ago, was the prime example of one who could inject humor into the most serious of problems.

At a time when many Americans, including Mark himself, were experimenting seriously with spiritualism, he brought laughter to both critics and practitioners. In one of his lesser known stories he created an individual who spent his time devising spiritualistic schemes.

The inventor's pet device was one for "materializing the dead to serve as cheap labor and for resurrecting departed statesmen in order to furnish the Congress with legislators who know enough to come in out of the rain."

FANFARE FOR '53 . . . A pretty television dancer welcomes the New Year, personified by the custom-built snowman Mom and Pop expect a big year during 1953.

Celebrating New Year's Is Centuries Old

Man has welcomed the New Year in a giddy fashion for centuries.

It has been observed on various dates in different times and places but the manner of celebration has been virtually the same from the times of the Romina. And in America, the merry-making spirit has been a strong one since the colonial days.

"Lewd Orgies" is the way writers have described the early festivals of the Romans. The celebrations were made for amount of food and drink consumed.

In feudal days in America it was the custom of younger people to visit tavern and friends to drink their health and toast the coming of the New Year. Some of the parties became small riots.

The custom of celebrating has grown to the point today the average American feels lost unless he has plans to "go somewhere" and "do something" on New Year's eve.

In France and Germany, the holiday is marked by festivities resembling those of this country. Before World War II, Paris and Berlin assumed a carnival atmosphere. Much of that spirit is returning as these countries recover from the economic and physical damage caused by the war.

Mexico and the South American countries mark the new year with extensive religious service and by lazy celebrations in every city, town and hamlet. All join in the merry-making which begins early and continues late.

For centuries the New Year's season has been a mixture of gaiety and solemnity; an occasion of glowing prophecy and grave stocktaking; a time for resolutions. And for people in all parts of the free world it is a time for merry-making.

Mummers' Parade Is Big New Year Event For Philadelphians

The big event in Philadelphia on New Year's is the annual Mummers' parade.

The custom comes down from the early English and Swede settlers in the vicinity of Philadelphia. The English cherished the traditional Mummer play "St. George and the Dragon," while the Swedes were fond of masquerading informally on New Year's eve. The two customs merged.

After the Revolution, George Washington replaced St. George as the central figure of the festivities. It wasn't until 1901, however, that the mummical government officially recognized the parade.

After that, the all male parade became a community project, sponsored by civic and fraternal organizations. Today it is the greatest annual event in Philadelphia's crowded schedule of activities. Thousands watch the parade, which begins in early evening and often continues into the wee hours of the New Year.

'Jour de L'An' Is Gayest Day of Year For French-Canadians

The gayest day in the calendar for French-Canadians is "Jour de L'An" — New Year's Day — the occasion for family re-unions and exchanging gifts.

The most important event of the day is the "blessing of the patriarch." It is the custom for a French-Canadian when he gets up on the morning of January 1 to speak to no one until he has been to the father of the house and asked for his blessing.

Each one goes down on his knees and says: "Father give me your blessing." The father in reply holds out his hand and says: "May God bless you my child; I bless you with all my heart."

Mrs. George W. Taylor is confined to her home from a cold.
