Trade, Not Aid

Foreign trade is a complex subject. However, one fact is not difficult to understand. Trade must be a two-way street.

An example of the constructive force of foreign trade may be found in the late industry. The rubber industry of India lacks the farmers of America with the farmers of Asia and, in doing so, has found a ready market for the products of American agriculture...

A New Look

Things are changing, gradually but, in Washington today. That old course of apparently endless money, the U. S. Treasury, is taking on a new look.

U. S. News and World Report opened a feature article on what is happening with the re-education of China.

'Bear' Facts

"Getting something for nothing out of the government isn't as easy as it once was. The change will be hitting home before long. It will mean fewer services of many kinds, less federal money for hospitals, power, Army bases and so on."

"Efforts will be felt by investors, business, politicians, workers—about everybody, including 50,000,000 taxpayers."

Some of those who will involve very large sums of money. Some will involve relatively small sums. But whether the scale be big or little, the principle is reaching into almost every government office."

"It seems to me that all of such 'fact' borders on the fact and even though it is not yet in the public domain, it is an excellent opportunity to sell more of one of the fact which readily degrade such talk."

"Farmers and estimators should heed the warning of manufacturers that animals have been poisoned by applications of toxic chemicals."

PROFITS TO REGULATE HOMES FOR AGED

Homes for the aged and infirm, whether operated for charity or as commercial ventures, come in the regulatory process of the State Department of Economic Security Monday.

The department, under terms of a 1952 legislative act, will take over regulation of the homes to insure that adequate standards of plumbing, safety, ventilation, diet and health facilities are provided.

Assistant Attorney General M. B. Hoffelty held that any such home, whether operated as a charity or as a business, must conform with the regulations provided by the law.

"Many old people receive a limited grant from the State which is supplemented by relatives, their churches, or by the county, that enables them to obtain admission into such institutions," Hoffelty said.

However, it is not necessary that institutions actually have Public Assistance recipients in them, to subject the homes to the law, Hoffelty said.

"If an institution has the facilities available to the public assistance recipient, it is subject to the regulations provided by the law."
