State Is Seeking Stenographic Help

The State is looking for stenographers to work in offices here, according to the Division of Personnel.

Several jobs are open and there is no backlog of applicants to take care of them. They call for persons of experience who can take dictation at 100 words a minute and transcribe at 30 words. Starting pay is $180 a month.

Applicants should write to the State Police Commissioner Charles C. Oldham at Frankfort.

Oldham said the danger was especially great in summer—the time of most construction—and that a number of accidents resulting from underpackaging up the caps were reported to the State Police last summer.

Children and adults alike should be taught to recognize caps on sight, the commissioner said. He described them as bright metal tubes, about as big around as a pencil and one-half to five inches long. They are made of aluminum or copper. Some have a cork at one end. some are closed by a fuse fixed in the end and electric blasting caps have two wires coming from one end, he said.

Exposure to air and moisture can dull or darken the cap but the explosive charge is dangerous until detonated, he warned.

Twenty-five per cent of all drivers involved in fatal auto accidents last year were under 25 years old.

Voters of Nicholas County

The issue is clear!

The day after I announced for the legislature, high state officials who openly state they expect to devote their attention to the election of a "friendly" legislature, announced support of their "friendly" friendly to the administration legislator, Bill Blanton.

This is the same set of machine politicians who want to amend the constitution so as to get control of all the state school funds (about $30,000,000 last year) as they now do the roads and make you, the taxpayers, come to Frankfort, hat in hand to get what you need to maintain your schools.

Mr. Blanton, as attorney for the K.U. and the L & N railroad has, in the past served those private interests in the legislature. There is no reason to believe he will do differently in the future. Being paid by K.U. he can't very well oppose it in its fight to stifle competition in electric power in the City of Paris, and to cripple the R.E.A.

Assert your good common sense and independence. Go to the polls on August 1st, and vote for a man who has no commitments except to represent the interests of Bourbon and Nicholas counties; who will vote conscientiously on each bill according to its merits, with the administration when it is to your interest, against it when it is not.

Twenty-nine candidates for public offices were in the field for the Democratic nomination in the August primary with about nine hours left until the deadline for filing for local offices expired at midnight Wednesday.

In an unexpected move, Spencer C. Payne withdrew from the county judges' race, leaving Incumbent Spencer Taylor and former County Judge Walter Shepherd as the only two candidates running for this office.

Payne said he was withdrawing because of ill health and expected litigation if he won the county judge's race.

A report that Lucy Barnett, local incurance agent, would file for Democratic nomination for that office was denied by Barnett Wednesday morning. He said that he had been seriously considering making the race for the post but "felt that it was too late now to get in."

Other late filers, rounding out the ballot, announced this week. E. M. Hicks of Maysville road announced his intention to run for jailer, swelling the number of candidates for that office to an even ten.

Incumbent Ralph E. Shearer filed for the county clerk's post and is not expected to have any opposition.

Sam E. Smith of the Concord road filed Saturday afternoon as a candidate for magistrate from the fifth district, and thus will oppose Incumbent S. Russell Barlow, who had announced some time ago.

Thus, with only a few hours left before the filing deadline at The Mercury is printed, only three local offices will be uncontested. They are the coroner's office, the county attorney's office, and the office of magistrate from District 1.

County Clerk John F. Sugg stated Wednesday that the drawing for positions on the ballot will take place at 2 p.m. in his office Friday. He stated that he had mailed notices to all local candidates notifying them of this time.
