Inflation Is The Answer

An excellent editorial on why beef prices remain comparatively high at retail—even though they are now substantially lower than they were not long ago—recently appeared in the Richmond, Virginia, Times-Dispatch, a paper which is edited by Virginius Dabney, one of the outstanding editors of the South.

The editorial said, "The housewife's question as to why retail prices are high is easily answered. For, while the price of beef-on-the-hoof has declined, the cost of shipping beef-on-the-hoof, of butchering, processing, storing, grading, shipping of carcasses, refrigeration, handling, packing, merchandising, plus interest and taxes, has gone up or stood still. These cost factors add the pennies-per-pound that add up to the price the housewife pays the grocer."

Later on, the editorial answered those who think that the solution to the problem lies in a renewal of government controls. It observed, "Price control of beef, even if it were feasible, would help neither the farmer nor the consumer, since all wages contributing to farm costs and beef processing costs would have to be controlled —a political impossibility, neither feasible nor enforceable, in peacetime."

To take one example of what has been happening, the average wages paid in the packing-houses have increased by more than 104 per cent since July, 1945. Other inescapable costs born by the packers, which must be reflected in the final selling costs of meat, have also shown heavy rises. In other words, the inflation that followed World War II has hit the meat industry just as it did all enterprise. And no enterprise can avoid passing the higher costs on to the consumer if it is to survive.

From Envelopes To Electricity

For many years the government has made a business of printing return addresses on stamped envelopes. It knocks thousands upon thousands of local printing establishments and county newspapers out of hundreds of thousands and probably millions of dollars worth of business were it carried on by private citizens.

There is nothing the local printer can do about it unless he can get the law changed. This is also a good example of how some government is established in business, its hold can seldom be broken.

While printing return addresses on envelopes might be called a matter of small concern in the the field of business, it is the principle involved that should interest everyone. From printing envelopes government has gone into many lines of business, most outstanding of which has been a 20-year crusade to create a federal electric power monopoly. Already some 20 per cent of the nation's power production is included in such a program. A large part of it is wholly tax-exempt. Some of it contributes comparatively small amounts to help with local taxes—it escapes all federal taxes.

From printing envelopes to half billion and billion dollar tax-exempt federal projects is quite a step, but the principle involved so far as putting private citizens out of business is the same. It is only another step for the government to sell groceries, automobiles, or to print newspapers "at cost," etc. It is all in the socialistic picture as it gains headway.

'Bear' Facts—

BY PAUL ERNEST
UK Football Coach

You can always tell when the college football season is drawing to a close. The always-faithful barometer is the increasing amount of space devoted by the newspapers to bowl talk.

Although it seems to me that this annual speculation begins earlier and takes crazier angles with each passing year, I'll have to admit that the subject is a pretty interesting one to most fans. With this in mind, I'd like to get on the bandwagon with my predictions on the way these post-season extravaganzas" may line up on New Year's Day.

Naturall I am excluding our own Kentucky Wildcats from consideration for purposes of discussion even though I am positive they deserve every possible consideration and will receive a just share of attention from the men who actually make the selections.

Oldest of all the New Year's Day affairs is the Rose Bowl. This game is now a closed matter between representatives of the Big 10 and Pacific Coast Conferences. Illinois looks like the best bet from the Big 10 since Purdue stopped Michigan State's long win streak recently. The host team could well be UCLA.

In the Cotton Bowl at Dallas, Baylor should give the Southwest Conference its strongest representative in several years. I believe their opponent might be Georgia Tech for the reason that Bobby Dodd's men probably would rather not meet the runnerup of the Southeastern Conference race.

The Orange Bowl is another closed affair now that they have signed agreements with the Atlantic Coast and Big Seven Conferences. While many people feel this may not produce a good game every year, the one this year between Bud Wilkinson's Oklahoma Sooners and Maryland (the team we open with in '54) should be one of the best.

Gay Old New Orleans' Sugar Bowl, which a lot of our fans surely have found memories of, will very likely have Ole Miss and Alabama or the Rebels and the SEC team that finishes breathing down the respective necks of Georgia Tech and Mississippi. An outside possibility would be West Virginia's highly-rated Mountaineers, but I hardly think they belong in the same"league" with the best Southeastern elevens and probably will wind up in the Gator Bowl.

Telephone men A. T. Perry and P. M. Ferry made adjustment for temporary modification of a Long Distance switchboard enabled the Company to provide local service for several hundred additional subscribers at a time when new equipment was in short supply.

The telephone you use today was once just an idea in the mind of Alexander Graham Bell. Since his time, countless other ideas of telephone scientists and engineers have contributed to the fast, clear telephone service you now enjoy.

The idea mill still runs. Telephone men and women everywhere are constantly seeking better and more economical ways of providing your service. Each year Southern Bell employees submit more than 25,000 suggestions. Many are put into practice, and cash awards are given by the Company.

This spirit of always searching out better ways to do the job pays off for you in the best possible telephone service at the lowest possible cost.

Tobacco Scales Being Checked

The 1,400 scales in tobacco warehouses throughout the state are being given an examination through the Department of Agriculture's Division of Weights and Measures this month to make sure they are accurate when sales start.

The operation is in charge of George L. Johnson, director of the Division of Weights and Measures, and eight men assigned as his assistants. He declared there are 1,400 scales to be tested on 216 warehouse floors at 38 market points, and that the program is as intensive as any ever undertaken by the department.

Farmers Hold Land With Cover Crops

Cover crops sowed in Knox county, as reported by UK County Agent Gray H. Williams, Chris Fisher, Heidrick community, 1½ acres of wheat and vetch on tobacco land; Joe McVey, Girdler community, two acres of rye and vetch on tobacco land; John Woolum, Bailey's community, four acres of Thorne wheat and vetch on land to be planted in corn; Carl Epperson, Flat Lick, 3½ acres of wheat and vetch; Bill Burnett, Woolum community, 1½ acres of wheat and vetch on tobacco land, and Waldo Kammon, Corbin, six acres of Vigo wheat to which he will add Kenland clover in February.

Child Welfare Services Improved

More trained professional workers, smaller work districts and better supervision of staff members are combining to give Kentucky improved Child Welfare services.

Mrs. Ruby A. Dennis, State Child Welfare director, reported today that her division now has 66 workers in offices throughout the state in addition to 12 consultants who supervise work on a district level. The number of consultants was increased last July 1 from nine, the previous high number.

"This increase enables us to provide better professional guidance for workers and help them do a good job in the counties to which they are assigned," Mrs. Dennis pointed out.

She said the districts are now smaller than previously and consultants are able to meet with workers more regularly. Districts range in size from eight to 13 counties.

Mrs. Dennis said that an increase in secretarial help in offices throughout the state has also helped increase the work load handled in the offices by freeing workers for more contact work with clients and children.

The state now has Child Welfare coverage in all counties, although it is still on an emergency basis in some, the director reported. A shift of workers to more remote parts of the state has left a need for more workers in urban areas, she added.

Approximately 100 farmers in Lee county primed tobacco three times this season.

Ledford Johnson, Grays community, has reclaimed five acres by clearing off brush and dredging a new creek channel. He sowed five acres of Ky 31 fescue and Landino clover for spring pasture.
