Proclamation

WHEREAS the progress, prosperity and national security of the United States depend upon the conservation, through their wisest and most efficient use, of our rich heritage of natural resources and

WHEREAS Petroleum, which supplies the American people with more than 62% of their power needs, is one of this nation's most precious natural resources and

WHEREAS the two million Americans engaged in the oil business use the most up-to-date conservation practices in finding, producing, refining, transporting and marketing petroleum products and

WHEREAS the conservation of all other resources, such as topsoil, water, food, fibres, rubber and scarce strategic metals and chemicals needed by civilians and their Armed Services is made possible on a large scale through the employment of machines powered and lubricated by oil and by the growing use of plastics, synthetic rubber and other products made from petrochemicals and

WHEREAS residents of our community who are engaged in the oil business are desirous of illustrating their contributions to conservation through speeches, films and other means, which explain their activities and the activities of their competitive, progressive companies,

NOW THEREFORE, I W. C. Talbert, Mayor of Carlisle, Ky., do hereby proclaim the week of October 11th to 17, inclusive, to be Carlisle and do call to the serious consideration of all citizens the many services and contributions which oil men who live and work amongst us have made and are making to the betterment of our public, social, business and private lives, as well as to the security of our beloved country.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of Carlisle to be affixed.

W. C. Talbert, Mayor

More Poultry Raised In Carlisle County

Flock-owners in Carlisle County reported net profits of $3.70 to $4.40 a hen last year, according to figures gathered by UK County Agent J. R. Davie.

Several large flocks have been established in the county, including one with 1,000 birds and three with 500 or more layers each. There are many flocks of 200 to 300 hens. One farmer produced 12,000 broilers.

Chlordane Used On Soil Insects

Using chlordane to kill soil insects has been well established in Barren county, according to County Agent J. O. Horning. Farmers in about every section of the county tried chlordane on tobacco land this season, most of them leaving small plots untreated as a check.

"Results have been startling," said Horning. "In some cases the tobacco will bring half as much again as tobacco grown on untreated land."

B. R. Edmonds, Barren county farmer, irrigated tobacco and pasture. As a result he grew some of the biggest tobacco in the county, Horning said. Many farmers went to see his tobacco.

Dry Spell Closes Hunting Season

Due to the fire hazard in Kentucky the squirrel hunting season was closed at midnight, October 1, Earl Wallace, Commissioner of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, announced.

While the squirrel season is the only one open right now, all hunting, for crows, groundhogs, etc. is banned by the order which was requested by Governor Lawrence Wetherby and the Division of Forestry because of the fire danger to the woods and fields of Kentucky. The ban will be lifted by the Department only when it is deemed the fire hazard has passed.

Mr. Wallace pointed out that any hunting days taken from the season by the ban will be added onto the squirrel season which was due to end on November 5, so that the hunter may be assured he will get the full 33 days which now remain in the hunting season.

The Department, Mr. Wallace declared, does not believe that the hunters are responsible for too many forest fires but the ban was declared to cooperate with other state agencies. The forest fire situation is not serious now, it was pointed out, but due to the high winds and the tinderbox condition of the fields and woods the move was deemed necessary as a preventive measure.

As of last Tuesday only 21 fires were reported by the Forestry Division, but it is claimed that new fires may be more difficult to control due to the high winds.

Harold Newland, Director of Forestry, points out that on Oct. 1 a law banning the burning of brush or trash within 200 feet of any woods is prohibited by law, except between 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon and midnight. He pointed out that this law is effective throughout October, November and December.

New and Delectable Cobblers

BY ALICE DENHOFF

THERE are many kinds of thought on the subject of that delectable dish known as the cobbler.

One prefers to make it with a pastry base. Another advocates biscuit dough. Some use two crusts; others one.

Some New Cobblers

Whatever your school, you might like to try new ways with cobblers such as the following:

To serve 6, sift once ¾ c. sifted flour, measure, add tsp. baking powder, ½ tsp. salt, sift again. Cream 2 tbsp. taken from 4 tbsp. butter; add ½ c. sugar gradually, creaming after each addition. Add 2 tbsp. taken from ½ c. milk, beating thoroughly. Add flour, alternate with remaining milk, a small amount at a time, beating after each addition until smooth. Add 2 tbsp currants and 1½ tsp grated lemon rind.

Turn into well-greased tall pan dish (tichel before). Combine remaining butter, ½ c. honey, 1¼ c. water and dash of salt. Pour over batter. Bake at 350° F. 40 to 45 minutes. Serve warm with cream.

Main Dish Cobbler

A main dish cobbler is made with a bran cereal pastry.

Cut 2 lb. round steak into one-inch cubes; add 1½ c. sliced onions and brown in ¼ c. shortening. Stir in 2 tsp. salt, ¼ tsp. pepper, tbsp. Worcestershire sauce, 3 tbsp. chopped parsley and 2 tbsp. flour, mixing well. Add 2½ c. water slowly; stir constantly. Add 2 c. diced raw potatoes. Cover and simmer about 30 min. Pour into greased 8½-in. casserole.

Bran Pastry

Cover with bran pastry rolled ⅛-in. thick. Prick with fork to show wedge-shaped pieces Bake at 450° F. about 20 min.

To prepare pastry, roll ½ c. bran cereal until fine; combine with 1½ c. flour and ½ tsp. salt. Cut in ⅓ c. shortening. Add 4 tbsp. cold water (more or less) a little at a time, until dough is moist enough to hold together.

Tidbits Of Kentucky Folklore

Dr. Gordon Wilson

It is characteristic of most of us to look back and try to find not how we came to have certain interests rather than others. As a dabbler in folklore for more than a third of a century I am often puzzled over the number of influences that have made me love folk music. Nearly all of these influences were casual, by no means planned or even suspected as existing, except by looking backwards.

First in influence in this interest in folklore came in my own home. We were in no sense a musical family; most of us could hardly stay on a tune; but we loved music, whether we could make it or not. Long before I could remember, Mother had almost lost her voice and had great difficulty in singing other than very simple melodies. But from her I learned many a Civil War song, some of which I have since found in books, but some of them still purely oral.

Even the ones I have learned to look for in folk-music collections often differ widely in words and music from the ones that the oral-lity transmitted to me. It was from Mother that I learned "The Year of Jubilo," the Civil War song telling how a master ran away and left his plantation when "the Lincoln gunboats" came down the river, presumably the Mississippi, along about the time of the Columbus, Kentucky, battle.

Another war song was "The Happy Land of Canaan," a song that rejoiced at the defeat of Grant at Cold Harbor. By the way, once in very recent years on one of the radio shows a very large sum of money was offered to anyone who after several weeks of errors, guessed the name of "The Year of Jubilo," and that tune was for a long time the theme song of a well-known radio program. Rather oddly, Mother did not know many folk nonsense songs, though I do recall that she taught me "Frog Went A-Courting." We had no musical instruments other than a French harp, but one winter when we kept the church organ to keep it from getting out of order in the damp church down in the creek bottom, I learned to pick out tunes in the song books and to improvise slightly on tunes that I knew how to sing but had never seen in a book.

My best education in folk music, as I have said several times in this column, came from Aunt Jane, one of the best friends of my childhood. Aunt Jane had one of the best ballad voices I have ever known, clear, resonant, full of lavish trills and turns. Her repertoire was quite large: ballads, love songs, patriotic songs, trick songs such as have been so popularized in our day by youth assemblies and camps, besides several different waves of religious songs and hymns. When she came to see us, we begged her to sing, and she nearly always obliged us, for music was for her an escape from a very humdrum, almost tragic, life.

Of course, I did not know then that was folk music, and what wasn't, but I know now that we had a way of calling most often for the songs that were oldest and most traditional. Some of her songs, I learned later, had been "popular" compositions by well-known song-writers of the late nineteenth century, but Aunt Jane had never seen the words in print or hummed over the notes as set down in a song book.

She, like many others in our remote time and place, could read music almost as easily as she could read print, thanks to the old-fashioned singing school. Somehow, though I cannot yet tell how, her singing took us away to strange lands where romance was a reality, where knights and ladies were settled and not mere illustrations in the few illustrated books that we had seen. The tragedies that appeared in her ballads always were breaking, so heart-breaking that we somehow associated our neighborhood tragedies with the people of the ballads; our actual people could claim reality only because they resembled the men and women of the songs.

I can recall how I sometimes discovered new very much like Barbara Allen some local high-headed girl was. And Aunt Jane's characters in the ballads were, as Bradley Kincaid so aptly says, real people; the events of the ballads were so.

Strip Of Highway Being Rubberized

The University of Kentucky is cooperating with the Kentucky Highway Department in an experimental project which includes the rubberizing of a section of highway near Louisville.

This joint venture marks the first time in Kentucky that rubber has been used in any fashion on a public road. A part of the Dixie Highway just South of Algonquin Parkway is being used as the testing strip.

State Highway Department officials are trying to give motorists a better road through the addition of a synthetic latex compound, 5 per cent, to the asphalt surface being laid. The rubberized road is being alternated along a three-mile stretch with the regular asphalt surface and another section in the test that has 2 per cent of the latex added.

Engineers of the Highway Materials Research Laboratory of the University of Kentucky are assisting state officials in the actual work. The latex is a development of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, and through a research contract awarded the UK laboratory by this firm, tests have been in progress for more than two years.

According to Firestone officials, their company has been experimenting with rubber for roads for 25 years. It was just recently, however, that the most promising type was discovered. The University will continue its experiments under the Firestone grants.

It is hoped that the rubberized surface will gain in flexibility and in durability, and engineers think it will improve the weathering properties of the ordinary asphalt surfacing materials.

Research grants to the UK highway laboratory are administered by the Kentucky Research Foundation. This organization was founded in 1945 to further research, public service and scholarship at the University.

Industry Accidents Drop During Drive

Twenty-two Kentucky foundries participating in a special industry safety program experienced 15 fewer disabling injuries during the program than during the preceding six-month period—a frequency reduction of 22.9 per cent in the average accident rate—it was announced today by Commissioner of Industrial Relations Edwin C. Willis.

The safety drive began February 1 and continued through July 31. There were 58 accidents in the preceding six months, and only 43 during the special safety program.

"The results demonstrate conclusively that safety consciousness pays off in any industry," Willis observed. "Similar special programs will be offered to other industries in Kentucky but safety is still a continuing day-to-day job for all industry."

During the fiscal year which closed June 30, there were 13,534 industrial accidents reported to the State Workmen's Compensation Board, a nine per cent decrease from the previous year's total of 14,861, and a 27 per cent decrease in accidents during the last four years when a total of 18,630 accidents were recorded.

Silos Save Feed In Hickman County

Sixty-one trench silos helped farmers in Hickman county salvage corn that once was expected to yield 100 bushels an acre, but which drought reduced to probably 25 bushels, according to UK County Agent Warren Thompson. Twenty-six additional silos were dug this year. Many farmers made hay out of soybeans, their only cash crop.

The corn crop was cut 70 per cent, Thompson estimated; beef cattle prices "hit the bottom," and dairy production dropped 40 per cent. All in all, it was the worst drought for Hickman county in 20 years, Thompson said.

Warning To Speeders

Beginning today, the City of Carlisle Police Department will be on constant watch, night and day, for those violating the speeding and driving laws in all sections of the city.

Those apprehended for speeding offenses will be cited to Police Court and fined accordingly.

Also, to necessitate the flow of traffic through town, unloading zones must be kept clear at all times to allow trucks to use these zones while unloading and thereby keep them from double parking in the street and causing traffic congestion.

Also anyone parking on yellow line or in cross walk will be fined $8.50 for each offense.

The Police Department asks the cooperation of the residents in these matters.

KENTUCKY UTILITIES COMPANY

JOHN T. COLEMAN, a Southern Bell telephone man, rushed to the rescue when a lady fell into a 25-foot well at Anniston, Alabama. She was clinging—almost exhausted—to the well in 10 feet of water.

HE SAVED A LIFE WITH A GARDEN HOSE...

Making quick use of what was at hand, Mr. Coleman tied a length of garden hose to a tree, lowered himself into the well and supported the lady above water until she could be raised to safety with a rope. Then he applied first aid before an ambulance arrived.

A courageous act? Yes. But equally important, quick thinking in an emergency. It speaks well of the type of men and women who provide your telephone service—often going beyond the call of duty.
