Greatest Of Dangers

"I place economy among the first and most important of republican virtues, and public debt as the greatest of the dangers to be feared."

That was written nearly a century and a half ago, by one of the ablest of our Presidents, Thomas Jefferson. And it applies with infinitely more force to the conditions that exist now as against the conditions that existed then.

The Great Baby Boom

A recent issue of Time magazine carried a feature article which began: "The U. S., which was buying baby food at the rate of 270,000,000 cans in 1940, this year is buying it at the rate of 1,500,000,000 cans. In the same period, the U. S. toy industry has grown from an $84,000,000-a-year stripling to $900,000,000 giant, and the sale of bicycles has almost doubled . . . These are the measuring sticks of the Great Baby Boom."

Time then dealt at some length with the far-reaching significance of this. One paragraph said: "By 1975 the U. S. will need to set a 'fifth plate' for every four persons now consuming. Setting this fifth plate will demand an increase in cattle production, for instance, equivalent to all the present production of Texas plus Oklahoma and Minnesota, and enough more lambs to match the great production of Montana, Wyoming, Utah and Nevada combined. To produce this much food, every five acres of U. S. land must produce as much as six acres today—creating a tremendous need for more tractors, fertilizer, soil conditioners and other means of increasing food production."

We all know that mechanized farm equipment has created an agricultural revolution in the space of little more than a century. What fewer of us realize is that this revolution is still in high gear and gaining momentum. For this equipment, allied tools and techniques, not only makes greater and more economical production possible—it also is the means of conserving and improving the land for future generations.

The 'Short Ballot' Amendment

(The Kentucky Standard)

The "short ballot" amendment which will be voted on in November will give the Legislature power to determine the manner of selecting four constitutional members of the Governor's cabinet. The offices, now elective, are secretary of state, state treasurer, commissioner of agriculture, labor statistics, and the superintendent of public instruction.

Chief purpose of the amendment is to give the General Assembly authority to permit the governor to appoint four cabinet officers.

One of the chief arguments for making these four posts appointive is that the office of the state superintendent of schools would become a professional post rather than a political one and that the State Department of Education would be subject less to the influence of party politics. Long-range planning to improve education, proponents of the amendment say, is necessary if education is ever to achieve a stable basis, and it cannot be accomplished when the superintendent of public instruction must be elected every four years and cannot succed himself.

State superintendents for the past quarter century have advocated making the office appointive on the grounds that selection should not be political.

We fail to see how the office can be anything but political when the governor cannot succeed himself and the administration changes every four years. To the victor belongs the spoils and every time a new governor takes his seat in Frankfort, just that often would the superintendent of public instruction and other cabinet members be changed. And those who would get the jobs would be those who stand in political favor with the governor.

The people should be permitted to continue to choose their own state officers. There is no more politics in that than for the Legislature to permit the governor to make an appointment of those who can assist him the most politically.

Vote NO on November 3!

College Enrollment Expected To Increase

Enrollment in Kentucky's six state-supported schools of higher learning—the University of Kentucky and Western, Eastern, Murray, Morehead, and Kentucky State colleges—will increase considerably in the years just ahead.

That prediction is made in "Working Together to Serve Kentucky," a booklet recently published by the Kentucky Council on Public Higher Education. Among the reasons pointing to such an increase are:

1) Thousands of World War II veterans who otherwise would not have attended college have received college degrees and thereby added to the "go-to-college-consciousness" of Kentucky; 2) Never before has such value been placed on college degrees by business and industrial firms; 3) Increased demands in all fields indicate a continued rise in graduate enrollment; 4) Recent years have shown an increasing percentage of college-age youths who actually attend college; 5) There is a natural tendency on the part of parents to seek a better education for each new generation, particularly if the parents themselves went to college.

The most important factor, however, is the steadily climbing birth rate in Kentucky. During the depression years the number of babies born in this state averaged 57,467 per year. Since 1950 the average per year has been 73,479.

All past enrollment studies in Kentucky and throughout the nation indicate that even without the effect of other factors, such an increase in the birth rate is certain to bring a similar increase in college population. College enrollment is expected to increase slightly for the next two years and then rise sharply between 1955 and 1960.

A copy of the booklet may be obtained free by writing to the president of any of the schools mentioned above or to the Council on Public Higher Education, Frankfort.

'Bear' Facts—

By PAUL BRYANT
UK Football Coach

Football historians of the next decade, tracing the trends of the grid sport and consequences of the abolishment of two-platoon rules, will undoubtedly mention the beginning of the new era in terms of effects felt by the many good teams.

While the records indicate an apparent connection between the rules changes and the success (or lack of it) enjoyed by grid units representing schools of varying reputation and size, I believe another aspect might be explored as perhaps even a more basic topic.

This is the fairly obvious reality that a large percentage of the high-toated offensive backs are not doing so well in their attempts to live up to the reputation built up during the days of free substitution. I would not say that any of them are complete washouts by any stretch of the imagination. In fact, most are still very dangerous performers when called upon by you. What I mean to point out is that they are not doing as well under two-way play conditions as they might have been expected to do on the basis of normal improvement over good performances of last season.

The rule forbidding free substitution for those backs has been directly responsible for this condition. Reasons for it are two-fold: (1) No offensive specialists are in there to help and (2) defense takes something out of their offensive back, making him less effective carrying the ball.

For a few illustrations of how good backs are not making sensational showings, one need not look further than the Southeastern Conference. Take the cases of Leon Hardeman and Bill Teas of Georgia Tech, Alabama's Bobby Luna and Corky Taylor, Ole Miss' Gee of Tulane and Florida's Rick Casares.

In fairness to the few top backs who aren't been bothered by the substitution limitations, I should mention a couple of boys who'll be among the fans and their coaches a good deal this year—Jackie Parker of Mississippi State and Kentucky's own Steve Meilinger's efforts to date have netted to some extent but not enough to keep him from consistently coming up with fine performance in the clutch. These are the real athletes who should rate high mention in any future analysis of the rules changes.

F. H. A. News

By Janet Mitchell

The Nicholas County Future Homemakers of America held a meeting October 16 in the Agriculture room.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Shirley Jennings. Della Green led the devotional program. The secretary, Peggy Small read the minutes of the summer meeting. The F. H. A. creed and purposes were repeated in unison by all. Lenore Richey led the group in the F. H. A. song.

Nicholas County sent two delegates from our organization to the State F. H. A. meeting at Murray. Shirley Jennings told us about the meeting there. The other delegate was past president, Jane Sisk.

The plan of work made out this summer by the officers at their meeting was presented and approved by the entire group.

Plans were discussed for the initiation of the Freshmen girls. A committee composed of Vivian Jones, Bonnie Spencer, Janet Mitchell, and Patsy Asbury was chosen by the president to work on initiation plans.

Following the business meeting Miss Ellis showed us slides of many of the girls modeling their garments which they made during the summer.

The Nicholas County chapter now has a total of 52 members and are planning the initiation of the Freshmen girls.

The meeting was the ajourned.

Early vegetables and potatoes were good in Elliott county.

Between 60 and 70 percent of the dogs in Logan county have been vaccinated against rabies.
