Time To Talk Sense

Civil strife anywhere is factor some serious problems. How they are solved can affect the national economy, the nation's defense, and the living standards of the people.

Since World War II the coal business has been badly hurt by circumstances over which common sense management has no control. Capital expenditures have increased. Mines' wages have gone up. Freight rates for hauling coal are high. Competitive fuels have been whittling away at the coal industry. It will take up to ten years to replace the coal industry as just making enough profit to keep itself in the strong, healthy condition that this critical time requires.

More Mouths To Feed

Whelan McMillen, Editor of Farm Journal, recently wrote that the "old problem of surplus foods which have plagued agriculture in recent years is proving persistent." Before, however, we become too worried about the surplus, let us be concerned with whether they can produce enough for our expanding needs.

Tidbits Of Kentucky Folklore

Dr. Gordon Wilson
Many farmers in this section are still not clear on the old rule of the farm, and that is, to produce more than you can consume. The surplus is sold to the market. The surplus is sold to the market. The surplus is sold to the market.

McGuire Arrives To Be Health Officer

Rossell Elected To City School Board
Thursday, Sept. 7, 1953
Dr. C. McGuire arrived in Carlisle to assume his duties as health officer of the city. He was accompanied by his wife, and his two children, and was welcomed by the city officials.

Sometimes...

With the advent of modern civilization, "sometimes" events occur that are not only unusual but also surprising. Sometimes a man will find a treasure, or sometimes a man will find a treasure.
