104 Communities Enter Second KCC Community Development Contest

One hundred and four communities are entered in the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce Community Development Contest, according to R. M. Watt, chairman of the State Chamber's Industrial Development Committee. This is a 30 per cent increase over last year's 80 entrants.

The 104 communities represent 92 counties and are localized in every section of the State. Local organizations sponsoring their communities as entrants include chambers of commerce, junior chambers of commerce, boards of trade, development associations, improvement associations, Lions, Kiwanis, Rotary and other civic clubs, women's clubs, Homemakers Clubs, a newspaper, an American Legion Auxiliary, and a 4H Club Council.

Designed to encourage and reward improvements in all phases of community life, the contest offers prizes totaling $4,000 which must be spent by the winning communities on local improvements. The contest period is from March 1, 1953, to February 28, 1954. Deadline for entering was September 15, Watt said.

Divided Into Groups

Three prizes are offered in each of two competing groups—one composed of communities whose trade areas have less than 15,000 population, and the other of communities with trade area population of 15,000 or over. The two first prizes of $1,000 each will be awarded by Ashland Oil & Refining Co. and Kentucky Utilities Co. Second prizes of $700 each are sponsored by Louisville and Nashville Railroad Co. and Western Kentucky Gas Co., Knoxville Fertilizer Co. and Handmacher-Vogel, Inc., will offer third prizes of $300 each.

Contesting communities will be judged on civic improvement, rural development, main street modernization, industrial development, organization, and presentation. Each entrant will submit a scrapbook containing newspaper clippings, local committee and organization reports, before-and-after photographs of expansion, modernization, and renovation projects, and similar data denoting activity of the community.

THE GARDEN

By John S. Gardner

Many letters have come asking if blight caused the early fruit of tomatoes to drop. The explanation was "weather." It will be recalled that about tomato-setting time, the nights were cool and rain fell intermittently. As tomatoes are a warm crop, this combination operated against them and the first clusters were lost; where this continued, the second cluster also dropped.

Then came hot, dry weather, and the plants, already handicapped by having been set "wet" and by the unseasonable start, grew slowly, bloomed sparsely, and much of the pollen was literally cooked by the heat and more blossoms dropped.

Home gardeners were not alone in this, as witness the unusually high prices commercial growers received because their crops too, were late and shy. In late July, blooms started sticking, and plants that were protected by spraying began yielding.

Irrigation Helped

It is noteworthy that growers who irrigated suffered less than the others, but irrigation should not be undertaken by home gardeners using "city water" unless it is done right.

Many letters dealt with tomatoes' leaf-curling. While occasionally this might have been because of disease, most of it was nature's way of conserving scarce moisture by exposing less leaf surface to the drying sun. Where such plants died, it was due to drought.

In some places, entire plantings of tomatoes showed wilt, the plants later dying. An "autopsy" on these cases would usually show stems invaded with fungus caused by nematodes within them that cut off moisture from the tops. Gardeners who sent in such specimens were helped by the Experiment Station's Agronomy Department, which, by reason of extensive research work, has the answers. In cleaning up the garden for the winter or for sowing a cover crop, look closely at tomato roots, and clear up this trouble before planting time in 1954. If tomatoes wilted and died, but had no lumpy roots, the probability is that the garden is infected with wilt disease. The remedy is to use only the varieties that are wilt-resistant, such as Break O'Day, Valiant, Marglobe and Rutgers.

The Windward Islands in the British West Indies archipelago were so named because they lie full in the path of the cooling northeast trade winds, says the National Geographic Society. The Leeward Island chain to the north is less exposed to the prevailing winds, hence its name.

DOWFUME MC-2 IS LOW-COST AID TO BETTER TRANSPLANTS

Gassing tobacco bed soil controls weeds, nematodes and wireworms

Many tobacco growers in your area are planning to gas their plant beds with Dowfume® MC-2 before sowing the seed. Soil gassing with this effective soil fumigant kills weed and grass seeds and grass stolons in top soil . . . controls nematodes, wireworms, grubs, etc., and allows the plant root system to expand to the fullest . . . controls certain damping-off fungi such as black shank present in the soil.

Dowfume MC-2 contains methyl bromide for thorough penetration and rapid aeration. Tobacco can be seeded soon after soil treatment. Dowfume MC-2 helps produce healthier stands of uniform seedlings in clean plant beds. You can also reduce your plant bed area, since more seedlings survive per area in treated beds. Ask your dealer for Dowfume MC-2 and the simple applicator, tubing and gasproof cover for its use. THE DOW CHEMICAL COMPANY, Agricultural Chemical Department, Midland, Michigan.
