Safety Conference Set For Louisville

State officials and safety leaders from Kentucky will appear on the program of the 15th annual Southern Safety Conference and Exposition set for March 7-9 at the Kentucky Hotel in Louisville.

The conference, which will attract delegates from 14 southern states, will feature discussions on highway, farm, industrial, mining, school, aeronautical, railroad and home safety, and fire prevention. Meetings will be open to the public.

Charles B. Jones, executive secretary of the Governor's Committee on Highway Safety, will preside at a traffic safety meeting at 10 a.m. the opening day of the conference. A. D. Sisk, Kentucky chief of Mines and Minerals, will be in charge of a mining discussion at 2 p.m. the next day.

Capt. Estill B. Jones of the Kentucky State Police will preside at a traffic meeting at the same time.

Tid Bits Of Kentucky Folklore

"BY THE HIGHWAY"

A late-fall visit to Fidelity in 1933 brought to mind the fact that the houses I knew—the ones that are still standing—are now largely off the main highway. In horse-and-buggy days, when fashion seemed to be in a hurry, the roads wound over the landscape, making many a curve. Today the highways, cutting a pretty generous end by ears, emphasize straightness. Consequently, many a house that I once knew sits forlornly by a remnant of what used to be first road, far from the rush and hurry of the paved highway.

As people have become better off financially, they have built new houses by the new road, in order to have better access to the world that they are now a part of. Some of the old-timers, partly because of hallowed memories of the "old place" and partly because today is none too plentiful, still live in the place tucked away along the old road. As all of my experience except a very few visits to Fidelity goes back to the old days of crooked roads and their attendant houses, I now can hardly guess where I am when I drive in the Fidelity neighborhood.

Sometimes I see a house away across a field that awakens memories of a kind, but I cannot quite enough view of the house to reconstruct any place that I once knew. And the new houses by the highway, very much more modern and attractive, are just houses to me; for they awake no memories. I am sure their occupants are just as fond of them as I was fond of our old homes, but to an outsider the new houses are merely new houses, not homesteads. In time, of course, they will acquire homestead status, after the shade trees and the orchard have had time to develop a homeness about the whole place.

On this same brief trip to Fidelity I went to the site of my own old home, for the house itself was torn down in 1939. This was my first sight of the old-house place since then. Briars and weeds and bushes have about obliterated everything that I could recognize. Only a few of the old trees survive, some of them being considerably more than a century old now. And the little trees that my brothers and I set out are so large that I feel unable to associate them with the young boys who, looking forward a future that seemed exceedingly remote, set out a small tree, planting to time and nature to do the rest.

Too far away from the modern second-class road that has replaced the mere trail that I knew, this house site is probably doomed to pass out of memory as a place where a house once stood, like the many "old-house places" that I loved to frequent when I was a child. Maybe my path free will some day be regarded as a left-over from the time when the first forest grew up there after the prairies ceased to exist. A few hundred yards away by the side of the road, other houses will grow up, leaving my old place as a four-square reminder of older and crudder days.

Now, I could stop right here and probably leave you wondering what all this is about. It isn't all sentimentality, even though it is strongly colored by it. Human institutions are for ever being left off the main highways. Once they were just as much a part of the scheme of things as my house, home of the beloved old country doctor, was. Times changed, new roads were built, and what was a sort of neighborhood center loses its importance. It ceases to be a world, even a satellite; it just ceases to revolve around anything. Like some stray comet or other celestial body, it just occupies space, hardly a part of anything that seems to count.

Only an occasional star-watcher, like an antiquarian or folklorist, even suspects that these wandering asteroids were once parts of a major planet. The rest of humanity see them only as an astronomer sees the shower of meteors, parts of a dead world into whose orbits we sometimes come. And a few people, who happen to be around when the meteors flame, say nonchantly: "Look, a star is falling." And the newer way of life goes on—by the side of the big road—practically unconscious of a world that used to exist where now briars and bushes cover the old house site.

By Ken Kuhn

A gentleman and a scholar—and one of the outstanding football coaches of America!

That is the University of Kentucky's new gridiron mentor, Blanton Collier.

The man who will guide the Wildcat's football destinies fits all the descriptive classifications. No one could doubt the appropriateness of placing Coach Collier in the "gentleman" category when seen any time in all walks of life. A man who have known the native Kentuckian from Paris for a good many years, enthusiastically testify to the fact and not a single criticism is heard.

The short, mild-mannered tactician's appearance might easily lead one to think he is a scholarly professor on the University's staff. And a look at his background further contributes to the impression that he could pass as a professor and is indeed a scholar. Collier was educated at Paris High, at Georgetown College and took post-graduate work at U.K. to receive a master's degree in educational administration.

Least of all is there any room for doubt regarding the amiable Kentuckian's fitness for the tribute of "one of the nation's most outstanding football coaches. The new Wildcat grid chief is respected in athletics circles the country over as a perfectionist and capable student of the intricacies of the game. Although the Kentucky job will be his first attempt in collegiate coaching circles, Collier has a unique background of 16 years in the high school coaching field with Paris High and eight seasons as backfield assistant with the fabulously-successful Cleveland Browns, professional team.

Paul Brown, the Brown's brilliant leader, often has credited Collier's assistance as a major factor in grilling the Cleveland club to a record of five consecutive championships in the pro league.

Families in Rockcastle county are planning to set 20 acres or more of strawberries.

James Hyatt, Bourbon county 4-H club boy, produced $1,25 worth of tobacco on an acre.

Ford presents two new deep-block engines

They're the industry's most modern engines with free-turning Overhead Valves and integral valve guides . . . high-compression, low-friction design . . . and extra deep-skirted crankcases. Both engines are designed for long life with smooth, economical performance.

Ford's new 130-h.p. Y-block V-8

New deep-block design means greater rigidity for smoother, quieter performance . . . longer engine life. Other features which make this engine a long-lived, smooth, stronghold performer are new low-friction design, Free-Turning Overhead Valves, new 3-bearing crankshaft, and new high-turbulence combustion chambers.

Ford's new 115-h.p. I-block SIX

Like the new Y-block V-8, this engine has Ford's I-block design for greater rigidity, longer engine life. Also, like the V-8, you get modern manifolding, low-friction design, high-turbulence combustion chambers, and Automatic Power Pilot. Both new engines give you amazing response at all driving speeds.

Check the extra dividends in the '54 Ford! You'll find nice, smooth-riding Built Level Front Suspension . . . a new, stronger frame . . . 2 optional power seats* . . . beautiful new styling, inside and out. They're all reasons why Ford's the one fine car in the low-price field.
