Education Local Responsibility The American System

A worried parent recently wrote Mrs. Oetta Culp Hobbie, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, expressing deep concern over committee reports which would place the responsibility for a large part of the cost of education on the parents of the children. In a letter to the Secretary, Mrs. Hobbie stated that she had been reading the reports of the committee and was deeply concerned over the possibility of a change in the American system of education. She stated that she had been reading the reports of the committee and was deeply concerned over the possibility of a change in the American system of education. She stated that she had been reading the reports of the committee and was deeply concerned over the possibility of a change in the American system of education.

One reason for this is that we do not like to see a lot of our boys and girls sent to school in the United States. Another is that we do not like to see the government spending so much money on education. We do not like to see the government spending so much money on education. We do not like to see the government spending so much money on education.

At Mrs. Hobbie's word, "Our public schools began to be local communities, they must stay there." The Federal Government must not interfere in educational matters which rightly belong to the local and State authorities.

Tid Bits Of Kentucky Folklore

"BURNING OF THE WOODS"

In our little Fidelity neighborhood lived an eccentric who regularly burned off the woods in his yard, in order, as he said, to destroy the ticks. He was not an illiterate man, not a poor one, for his acres were well above the average for a section where 160 acres are considered just respectability but not affluence.

When I was a very small child, I used to see the ticks near his farm house, at night, but I never saw the ticks. I was told that the ticks were so numerous that they had to be burned off. I was told that the ticks were so numerous that they had to be burned off.

For generations the people who lived in what is now the Mammoth Cave National Park cleaned up the ends of their land, burning off anything that would burn. This, plus other wasteful pioneer practices, reduced the land over most of this area to worn-out fields and gullies. Some of these old fields will require a whole generation to get back to their original fertility.

Now this is a parable, as you might guess. In the dry, dry year of 1931 it often feared that our childhood dream might come true. The whole dry world might go up in flames. Thousands of fields and forest fires broke out millions of acres of land were burned up. The whole dry world might go up in flames.

So if you are a farmer, you should be sure to have a good fire insurance policy. You should be sure to have a good fire insurance policy. You should be sure to have a good fire insurance policy.
