Friends, we are living in the "last days." The only answer to our national problems and your own personal problems, is a personal returning to the "Faith of our Fathers." Salvation is a personal matter. The question facing each one of us is, "What am I going to do with Jesus which is called Christ?" What has been your answer up to this time? What have you done with Jesus?

See announcement concerning homecoming elsewhere in paper.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Is the Universe, Including Man, Evolved by Atomic Force?" will be the subject of the Lesson-Sermon to be read at Christian Science services Sunday.

Man's dominion over all mortality is stressed in the readings from the King James Version of the Bible as well as those from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy. The Scriptural selections include the account as given in Matthew (14:22-32) of how Christ Jesus and Peter walked on the sea.

Readings from Science and Health include the following: "In proportion as matter loses to human sense all entity as man, in that proportion does man become its master. He enters into a diviner sense of the facts, and comprehends the theology of Jesus as demonstrated in healing the sick, raising the dead, and walking over the wave. All these deeds manifested Jesus' control over the belief that matter is substance, that it can be the arbiter of life or the constructor of any form of existence" (369:5).

The Golden Text is from Psalms: "God hath spoken once; twice have I heard this; that power belongeth unto God" (62:11).

The Garden
By John S. Gardner, University Of Kentucky

The winter is by no means a prophet, but he and others, too, see a striking resemblance between this spring's weather and that of 1950 when late blight ruined so many tomatoes. The only difference is that this year has been a drier. Acting on the proverb, "It's better to be safe than sorry," it is suggested that a blight spraying program be followed, starting now, at least when the first fruits are the size of a garden pea.

Either of two kinds of materials may be used, the coppers or the carbamates.

Good coppers are C-O-C-S and Copper-A, both 45 percent and the copper in oxychloride form that is effective against late blight particularly, but also against early blight now present (the browning and dropping of the lowest leaves). It is effective also, against the other three common tomato diseases, leafspot, lead mold, and anthracnose, any one of which may considerably reduce the crop. Generally, all are present.

Another good copper is tribasic copper sulphate (not copper sulphate, bluestone, which could do more harm than diseases.) It is 53 percent copper.

The rate for using the coppers is 2 level teaspoons per gallon of water, or a pound to 25 gallons, but when tri-basic is used, an equal amount of flour should be added to help keep the material from settling to the bottom of the sprayer tank.

The carbamates are Dithane Z-78, Parzate and Manzate, all 65 percent. Experiments at Lexington have shown they control tomato diseases, but they cause delay in fruiting. But the effect of late blight is much worse than this delay.

Spraying should be repeated every 10 days in normal weather, but if excessively wet, more than an inch of rain a week,) the sprayings should be weekly. At least eight sprayings should be given, or they could be continued to mid-September, making 10 to 13 in all. That many would pay off in having the plants continue bearing full-sized fruits until frost, with some to be picked green for ripening indoors.

Now is the time to start cauliflower, broccioli, brussels sprouts and cabbage for winter storing. One way is to sow seed in two's or three's where the plants are to mature thinning to one in a place. Another way is to sow a bed, transplanting in the garden about July 1. The former avoids the hazards of setting in dry weather.

All are cool crops, and cauliflower and broccoli that mature in late fall are better than when early-grown, and can be deep-frozen well. Brussels sprouts are late-growing only, to make the heads mature firm and to avoid a stale cabbage taste.

Many gardeners no longer grow late cabbage, because of unfavorable weather. Weather is only one reason for failure. It is a battle with cabbage worms, which have multiplied all summer on cabbage stubs. These stubs should be pulled as the heads are cut.

Another reason for late-cabbage failure is the yellows disease sometimes called wilt. It may affect early cabbage, but does much damage to late cabbage, since there then may be a lack of moisture.

For success with late cabbage use varieties resistant to disease, such as Wisconsin All-Seasons, or others listed in catalogs.

To fight worms, dust cabbage with 3/4 to 1 percent rotenone dust. This also may be used to control pests of cauliflower, broccoli and brussels sprouts. Rotenone has some effect on cabbage aphids, but a 10 percent Sabadilla dust is more sure. The lice must be hit directly because they do not eat leaves.

To keep cauliflower from branching and becoming loose and unusable, and from turning purple and brown, it must be shaded from the sun. This is done by drawing leaves together over the flower and pinning the tips with a toothpick or match.

Feed Concerns May Furnish Own Labels

The new Kentucky feed law, effective July 1, permits companies that manufacture or sell feeds to use their own labels instead of buying them from the University of Kentucky.

The labels are to contain the same information as now required, such as names of the feeds, ingredients and chemical guarantees. Farmers will have the same protection, it is pointed out by A. B. Poundstone, head of the Feeds and Fertilizer Department at the University. Inspection will continue as always, and yellow-tag feeds will bear yellow tags.

The main change in the law is permitting companies to use their own tags. In some instances, where paper bags are used, the information will be printed on the bags.

The new statute is patterned after provisions in other states and is known as the model feed law. The old Kentucky law, which was passed in 1906, is now brought up to date.

Weekly Recipe

June, which has been designated as Dairy Month, is the time for serving family and friends with a variety of milk products. As a main dish for luncheon or supper, home economists at the University of Kentucky suggest this dish which is rich in food value.

Cheese Casserole
3 T butter
1 t ground sage
6-8 slices of bread
1½ pound medium sharp cheese
3 eggs
3 c milk
1 t salt

Blend the butter and sage and spread the slices of bread. Between every two slices, place a slice of cheese, then cut the sandwich in four pieces. Butter a shallow casserole and arrange the pieces on the bottom and sides. Beat eggs slightly, add milk and salt; pour over cheese sandwiches. Let stand in refrigerator over night or for several hours. To bake, set dish in a pan of water in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 45 minutes, or until mixture is of custard consistency. Serve hot.

Menu: Cheese casserole, green beans, perfection salad, cornsticks, butter and rhubarb sauce.

Cold, refreshing drinks add enjoyment to summer days. They will be health-giving, as well, if they are made with milk, said Mrs. Pearl Haak, specialist in food at the University of Kentucky. In emphasizing that June is Dairy Month, she suggested that drinks be made inexpensively by the use of powdered milk, as recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture.

PEANUT BUTTER MILK—Combine 1½ c milk powder, and 2-3 c sugar, then add 6 c of cold water. Shake or beat until smooth. Add a small amount of the mixture to 1/3 c of peanut butter and mix well. Continue until all the mixture is used. When thoroughly blended, chill. Serves 6.

MOLASSES MILK—Mix 1½ c of milk powder and ¾ c of salt. Add 6 c of cold water to 1-3 c of molasses. Combine the two mixtures and shake or beat well. Chill. Serves 6.

MAPLE MILK—Blend 2 T of sugar and 1½ c powdered milk. Add to 6 c of cold water and ½ t maple flavoring. Beat or shake until smooth. Chill thoroughly.

SPICED MILK—Blend togeth. of 1½ c powdered milk, 1 T sugar, ½ t nutmeg, ½ t cinnamon, ¼ t salt. Add to 6 c water and beat or shake until smooth. Chill. Serves 6.

Obligations

should know when they employ anyone is whether the employee's work counts toward old-age and survivors insurance under the Social Security Act. If it does, the employer has certain obligations," R. A. Tweedy, Manager of the Lexington Social Security office said today. It is the employers obligation to report all covered wages up to $3,600 a year paid to each employee. With the exception of domestics who work in private homes and farm workers where cash wages only are to be reported, the value of meals, or board and room an apartment or house furnished the employee is considered as part of the reportable wages.

"All types of employee compensation are considered. They include salaries, fees, bonuses and commissions. It is immaterial whether payments are based on the hour, day, week, month, year, or on a piecework or percentage plan," he stated.

Vacation allowances and back pay are also wages for reporting purposes. Where the wages are paid in any form other than money, this must be considered. The amount of tips or gratuities paid directly to an employee by a customer is not the concern of the employer.

Tweedy concluded by saying, "Every employer subject to the Social Security tax should copy into his permanent records the names and account numbers of his employees exactly as they appear on their Social Security cards. This information is needed in connection with filing of the quarterly tax return for Social Security purposes."

More Sheep For Eastern Kentucky

The University of Kentucky, through its Agricultural Extension Service, is promoting interest in sheep raising in Eastern Kentucky. Farmers in at least nine counties have indicated they would like to establish flocks.

R. C. Miller of the University says eastern counties offer an opportunity for the development of a substantial sheep industry. The principal handicap for many years has been the lack of dog control. Now that the state has a new dog and rabies control law, there is no reason why sheep can't become an important source of farm income, Miller said.

Establish Herds Youngsters Told

Information sent from UK College of Agriculture and Home Economics indicates that now might be a good time for 4-H Club members and Future Farmers of America to establish herds of registered beef cattle. Seed stock is said to be near the lowest price in the past five years. By the time these youngsters could breed and have animals ready for sale, beef cattle should be in a strong position. At least that's what agricultural economists think.

Postures Improved By Early Clipping

Many pastures could be improved by mowing, says agronomists at the UK College of Agriculture and Home Economics. Clipping now would check weeds, even up the growth of the grass and generally make for improved grazing. Clipped grass is often more palatable than when left to grow. Also stock do selective grazing, leaving spots of grasses and clovers, which should be leveled down for uniform growth. In some instances, grass and clover growth is sufficient to make, hay to feed during dry weather or next winter.
