Modern electric ranges make cooking so simple, even a bride can expect finer results. Automatic controls, constant temperature, surface units and electric timers do the work out of cooking. What's more, you can actually see controls to start and stop cooking while you're away. That means you have more leisure time when you cook electrically. Not only that, electric ranges are clean, too. You get your free, flameless cooking for a brighter kitchen. You could never so hard to scrub carbon on pots and pans. They're safer and cooler, too. Surface units heat the pan directly, not the air around them. Heavy insulation keeps heat inside even for added kitchen comfort and faster, tastier cooking. Small wands, women who know cook electrically, say the electric range of your dream is at the dealer's.

Tid Bits Of Kentucky Folklore
By Dr. Gordon Wilson
"Water Monkeys"
This story is being written in mid-winter, when our coldest weather is in progress. I cannot help thinking of similar times in my childhood, when the likelihood of your childhood if you are middle-aged.
After the school was "out," just before Christmas, until Sunday School started up at Sipher Springs, on the first Sunday in April, life was relatively monotonous for our children. I was no exception, most of the time I lived at Fidelity, to have any other life as I had.
Sometimes, to keep our minds from going off at a tangent, we could even get out our arithmetic and figure a bit. But there was never a week in winter that did not become pretty monotonous. Facing three huge meals, attending to the stock, bringing in wood—these took up time but not all the time. We could even invent to take some eggs, but I was against my father's rules, for as to around at the last's bit as many of our neighbors did.
Since I was a very young man I had thrashed thousands of miles—over a hundred—in bird study, making scrapbooks and spent many a dry winter day cutting and painting. Even that can become tiresome after days and days of cold water weather. Once in a great while some preschooler would regard one or some of his friends as a "water monkey" after weeks of unrelenting winter life and cold water. The church would be as a guest room in a farmhouse, but two or three could warm things up, the preacher usually added his warning of another sort, especially for all those who differed from his brand of religion. And the winter slowly rolled away.
I wonder if the first onset of spring brings some look to good?
By contrast, winters now seem perfectly normal, whether they are cold or average. Life goes on about the same as in the other seasons. The telephone, the mail, the radio, the television set, school, church, visiting, social events—what does winter matter? And, rather oddly, the outdoors in winter as they are in summer or spring. Since I was a very young man I had thrashed thousands of miles—over a hundred—in bird study, making scrapbooks and spent many

COATNEY BROS.

Legislative Notes
By Tom Smith
Franklin Involvement in political warfare by the Kentucky Government in the final days of the 1934 session with administration forces full in full control and with only slight chance of any major controversial matters being brought to the Senate.
Three pro-labor measures are bottled in the Senate Rules committee along with the right to work proposal which probably is the most controversial of any bill introduced in the legislature this session.
The pro-labor measure held up in the Senate Rules Committee is a proposal to pay unemployment benefits to persons out of work for a number of days to allow them to return to work. It is another measure to allow the factory to decide whether it would enter the state.
The legislature must choose this bill in three consecutive sessions unless it is amended to allow the voters to vote on it. It is a bill to allow prosecuting attorneys to receive fees from taxation. Only two amendments may be voted in an election.
The administration, including the leadership of both the House and Senate, is looking to the general campaign next year and is taking care to avoid issues which might cost support for Democratic candidates in either the next election or in the fall.
The new development in the selection of a Democratic candidate for Governor by the State House is that the former Vice-President Allen W. Barkley will take a couple of more weeks before he will determine whether to accept the nomination of his party's leadership to become a candidate. This came at the aftermath of Barkley's Jackson-Hefferon Day speech.
Radicals within the party, although not in commanding positions, are plotting for Governor Lawrence in preference to the Democratic nominee. But the Governor, at present, is not seeking re-election.
Meanwhile, the judicial branch of the state's government came out in an alarmingly weak hour. Speaker Charles Barkley who allowed a pay increase of Appellate Judges to gain House approval immediately after his bill passed

The Carlisle Mercury, Carlisle, Ky.,—Thurs., March 18, 1934—Page 7
The House, the Senate Rules Committee voted out a measure for which Barkley had believed upon only throughout the session.
Lorenson promised an amendment acceptable to opponents of the measure is again brought up for a vote. The bill also would require registration of motor vehicles in the county in which they are principally operated.
Committee on Lorenson's amendment, Representative James Lambert, minority floor leader, of Richland County, said "We will let this bill pass if it is called 'leg bill' by the House of Representatives last week by Representative William L. Caldwell County. It may come out of Senate Rules with an amendment other than the $12,000 appropriation in half of eliminating it altogether. This appears to be the major objection of the administration to the bill. It would establish a dock control and provide for anti-rabies vaccination."
