An Outdoor Plague

Monogon, which plague most all of us more or less, no matter where we live in Carlisle, are said to travel only a few hundred yards from their breeding hole. So ridding ourselves of these pests may be largely a matter of individual effort.

Open areas, rain barrels, garbage holding water or any stagnant water furnishes breeding places for monogon. A little kerosene and old crankcase oil break up these mosquitos.

A few hours investigation and a can of oil may result in your being able to see the origin of these pests without climbing at unsmiling angles.

Try the oil treatment and you will be surprised with amazing results, you can persuade the city council and the county to undertake the spraying of this area again this year.

BLADES OF BLUEGRASS

The University of Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics has a collection of about 100 varieties of bluegrass and other grasses for sale.

Machines And Small Farms

Among the many changes that have taken place in the world of farming in the last generation or so, there has been a substantial increase in the size of the average farm.

It doesn't mean that the age of the small, family farm is coming to an end—that this kind of farm is unable to qualify for the benefits of mechanization. While the small farmer can't buy a lot of mechanized equipment, he can cooperate with his neighbors. One farmer buys a kind of machine, another buys a tractor, and so on. They pool their available and in-kind resources and share the work done—wisely, and at minimum cost in money and human energy.
