What About The Goslins?

Washington Report, which is published by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, has raised an exceedingly interesting question.

There is talk that the AFL, the CIO and some big independent unions may merge. In a recent speech, the president of a major steelworkers' union stated that individual unions should have the right to decide for themselves whether to join or not join such a federation.

Washington Report agreed, on the basis that membership in any organization should be voluntary. But then it said: "What now becomes of organized labor's efforts to force individual workers to join a union in order to hold their jobs?

"Evidently what's sauce for the gander is not sauce for the goslings."

Horsepower Tells The Story

What enterprise is the greatest user of power in all its forms?

The answer is agriculture—and its lead in this field is huge. Our farms now have 115,672,600 horsepower available—in tractors, trucks, electric motors, stationary engines, and so on. By comparison, all our factories use only 28,800,000 horsepower.

Here, in a simple set of statistics, is the story of this century's agricultural revolution. The internal combustion engine and electricity have transformed farming into an advanced and complex business. Farm equipment of a thousand and one kinds has made it possible for a smaller farm population, working a relatively fixed acreage, to feed a vastly increased non-farm population. And it has given the farmer more than the means to increase his production, and to earn a better living with less physical work. It has given him the means to conserve and improve his land in the process—and to save it for future generations who will be called upon to meet a still greater demand for food and fiber.

Where To Get A Job

One ever-present problem to young people when they finish schools and colleges—and start out into the larger world is where to get a job.

Today there is a tremendous opportunity in the field of marketing, according to authorities. Young people in growing numbers are turning to retailing as a career. It has been observed that marketers need "the best youth in the country to become salesmen."

Retailing, like all other branches of marketing, is as competitive an enterprise as anyone can imagine. The day when all that was necessary was to put goods on display and then wait for the customers to come flocking in has long since passed. Successful stores are putting more and more stress on better selling, better advertising, better inducements and promotions of every kind. Young people with the right aptitudes and a willingness to work and learn can earn good incomes to start with, and opportunities for future progress are virtually unlimited.

Retailing has always been a business which has brought its leaders up from the ranks. As an example, the top men in the big chain systems began, for the most part, at or near the bottom—as clerks, warehouse attendants, and so on. That's also true of other kinds of stores. And today the field is bigger and more promising than ever.

Letters to the Editor

November 10, 1954

Stanley E. Hecker, PHD
Division of Research
Department of Education
Frankfort, Kentucky
Dear Dr. Hecker:

I want to take this opportunity to thank you, both personally and on behalf of the Carlisle Parent-Teachers Association for driving to Carlisle, last night, November 9, in response to our request for a program on the Minimum Foundation and Proposed Legislation for 1956.

After your departure, a goodly number of people present including Mr. R. E. Davis, remarked what a fine job they thought you had done in explaining the Minimum Foundation Program for it obviously concerned itself with a great deal of statistical information which is for the most part very hard to explain in a public gathering.

Although our audience last evening was small, it did represent probably the most intelligent group of people in our community and I personally was delighted to see there people present for they are the kind of persons who can hereafter discuss this program very well their friends on an understandable basis.

Thank you again for bringing this program to us.

Very truly yours,
Charles M. Cox

Weekly Recipe

With ground beef down in price, there's added reason for serving it often in addition to its natural goodness. The family will continue to enjoy it if you vary its method of preparation, says Mrs. Pearl Haak, specialist in foods at the University of Kentucky.

Hamburger With Noodles

1 pound ground beef
¼ c chopped onion
½ c chopped green pepper
2 c canned tomatoes
1 t Worcestershire sauce
1½ t salt
¼ t pepper
1½ t sodium glutamate
1½ c water
1 6-ounce package broad noodles

Brown the beef, green pepper and onion in a large skillet that has a tight cover for later use. Add all remaining ingredients except the noodles. Stir three or four times to blend seasonings. Place uncooked noodles on top of the meat mixture. Cover tightly. Bring to boiling, then reduce heat and simmer 12 to 15 minutes until noodles are tender and have absorbed most of the liquid. Tomato soup may be substituted for the canned tomatoes. Serves 6.

Menu: Hamburger with noodles, buttered green beans, glazed carrots, fruit salad on lettuce leaf, biscuits, butter and baked pear with cream.

TV NOTEBOOK

By Gene Clinkenbeard

As might be expected, we notice where someone has finally gotten around to establishing a few rules of etiquette as regards TV-viewing. We will touch fleetingly on a few of the problems which badger the average family about to settle down for a quiet evening of TV.

If people arrive, unasked, when the family is watching a favorite program, must the set be turned off? The answer is no. The host might properly say, "We are enjoying a program, would you care to join us? Or would you prefer to chat with me in the next room until it's over?" In other words, it's not considered genteel to hustle the caller into a dark corner and ignore him like a visiting in-law (unless he is a visiting in-law).

If a guest is so rude as to chatter throughout a program others are trying to enjoy, what can the host do? Our etiquette expert advises that a guest should not be rebuked except in the most extreme circumstances. However, a gentle rebuke may be slyly implied. In other words, friends, suggestion to "shaddup," "drop dead", or "get lost" are not considered gentle however effective they may be.

When childrens' interests run counter to those of the adults it is suggested that a reasonable compromise between the viewing desires of youngsters and oldsters be worked out. Another solution—and we sort of cotton fondly to the thought—is to provide another set for the small fry and let them enjoy the antics of the cactus and sagebrush crowd in blissful quietude.

Remember, for a SECOND TV SET, of FIRST quality, see the Sensational SYLVANIA at GENE'S TELEVISION FIRST!

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

How the spiritually correct view of God and man destroys anxiety and restores peace of mind will be brought out at Christian Science services this Sunday in the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Soul and Body."
Scriptural selections include the following from Psalms 142:11: "Why art thou cast down, O my soul? and why art thou disquieted within me? hope thou in God for I shall yet praise him, who is the health of my countenance, and my God."
Among the passages to be read from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy is the following 394: 4-9: "We cannot deny that Life is self-sustained, and we should never deny the everlasting harmony of Soul, simply because, to the mortal senses, there is seeming discord. It is our ignorance of God, the divine Principle, which produces apparent discord, and the right understanding of Him restores harmony."
