The "Right to Work"

Support for the sake of argument that the 48 states of Congress should pass laws requiring that before a man could work on his trade, and before an employer could hire him, he would have to join a specified association, pay an initiation fee and regular monthly dues, and be prepared to submit to special investigations.

Do you suppose the men who drafted the Declaration of Independence and the United States Constitution with the Bill of Rights would have approved such restrictions?

Additional states are considering "Right to Work" legislation pending consideration of the eight to work free of any constraint.
